—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922 Star Co.)

This week you will live through the year's "longest days" with more than fifteen hours of sunlight each day. This morning, just after midnight, Summer began officially. The wise young man will use these long days, including hot Summer days, when others rest.

When the hare lies down to sleep the turtle can win a race. Many victorious race-winning cities will collect, as usual, at the end of this Summer.

Tell that to your young man who thinks the most important thing in the world for Jim is a good, long vacation. Remind him Edison's genius is 10 per cent. inspiration, 90 perspiration. Summer is the time for the perspiration.

Money for Wall street speculation cost only 2.75 again yesterday, a low interest rate. Some that speculated yesterday were happy for a while at least, especially if they bought Mexican Petroleum. Judging by its upward leaps and bounds, amounting to almost fifty points in a few days, somebody believes that Mexico and the United States will soon be on good business terms.

More important than the ups and downs of stocks is the steady upward march of scientific discovery. One man at Johns Hopkins, after working for years, has discovered a new particular vitamin. He calls it "vitamin D," that builds up bone. That discovery may put an end to the disease called rickets that kills thousands of children and makes others miserable cripples through life.

English scientists believe they will soon bring about disintegration of the atom. If man can pull the atom to pieces, he can harness up the power that holds the electrons together with a force inconceivable to us.

Remember it is no Jules Verne, but a trained scientist, who suggests that with the disintegration of the atom man could create and carry with him "atomic units," with power enough to move a great steamship across the ocean.

We live on a driving wheel, the earth, and our problem is on how to harness up the power in that wheel, twenty-five thousand miles round, instead of building little separate engines on the surface of the wheel.

California does things rapidly. Frank Vanderlip had 16,000 acres running fourteen miles along the Pacific ocean, just southwest of Los Angeles. He used it for vegetable gardening until E. G. Lewis saw it, and saw in place of vegetable gardens a city of white marble and red-tiled roofs. Before long, as you fly above the Pacific, near San Francisco, you will see that city a reality.

They did it in the days of Aladdin by rubbing a lamp and summoning genii. They do it now differently, but almost as quickly. The modern lamp is a combination of enterprise and advertising. E. G. Lewis needed fifteen million dollars to start his city. He printed one eighty-page advertisement in the Los Angeles Examiner. Then a four-page advertisement, then a page after page regularly for three months. Now the Title and Trust Company announces that the fifteen millions are subscribed and the new California city can start.

The people of Los Angeles say their city will be third in the United States in 1950. You only wonder at their moderation. Given a good idea, a good location, plenty of courage and good advertising, you can do anything in America.

Could anything be more useless, more wasteful of scientific knowledge than a "gland transplantation to renew an old man's vitality," unless that operation also restored youth to the mind?

Nothing could be more pitiful or objectionable than a collection of old men with active bodies and dull minds. Like concrete, the mind hardens with age, new ideas cannot penetrate it. The best thing a man can do is to die when the brain becomes hardened, get a new brain, and come back here again. To keep old, solidified brains alive is active, "vital" young bodies would be an insult to Providence and a thwarting of its plans, and it is not likely that that will be allowed.

Explorers mourn because "the world will soon be all explored, nothing more to discover." Climbers within a few hundred feet of the top of Mount Everest, will probably reach the top. Then only our Alaskan Mount McKinley will remain unconquered.

Once it was the source of the Nile men sought. They thought it came down from heaven and then travelled north through the sands of Africa. That was discovered. Then America. Australia, and all the different places. Then the North and South Poles.

Eleanor Montgomery Sanborn, eighteen-year-old bride of "Jack" Sanborn, son of the Boston coffee baron, who left him eight weeks after their wedding, was found in New York today by the Boston American.

Mrs. Sanborn, looking more like a high school senior than an unhappy bride, indignantly denied charges made by her twenty-year-old husband, and with even greater ardor defended her uncle, W. Robert Montgomery, Boston financier, who adopted her when her parents were divorced.

She charged that her husband forced her to write a letter at his dictation with which, she alleged, he told her he hoped to wring $100,000 from her uncle.

She said her husband took her to "Algremont," the Sanborn mansion in Winchester, locked the doors, while the house was deserted, held her by the throat, put his knee on her and with threats that he would kill her compelled her to pen a letter, the contents of which she says were banished from her memory because of her dread and hysteria.

TO SUE FOR DIVORCE.

That letter promises to be a big factor in later proceedings. Mrs. Sanborn announced to a Boston American reporter that she would institute suit for divorce as soon as she arranged matters with her uncle. She intimated that her grounds would be non-support, cruel and abusive treatment and kindred allegations.

Mrs. Sanborn is not exactly in hiding. She is not in a hospital and never has been. She is the guest of a school chum in a charming Summer residence suburb of New York.

BABE RUTH PASTOR IS PUNISHED AGAIN

Draws Two Days' Additional Suspension, and It Will Cost Him $1,500 in Salary

"Babe Ruth is going to behave himself or I'll keep him out of the game all Summer."

So declared Ban Johnson, president of the American League today, as he suspended the Sultan of Swat for two more days without pay following his altercation yesterday in Cleveland with Umpire Dineen.

The Babe was under a three-day suspension without pay for using vile languages to the same umpire in Monday's game between the New York Yankees and Tris Speaker's Cleveland Indians.

If the Babe behaves himself now he will return to the game on Monday here in Boston, the Yanks opening a series with the Red Sox tomorrow.

HIS FOURTH SUSPENSION.

This is the fourth suspension the temperamental home-run clouter has drawn this season. He was "sat down" after the close of the season last Fall by baseball's high commissioner, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, for participating in a barnstorming trip last Fall after the World Series, and was not allowed to play until a month ago.

His second suspension cost him a day, following trouble with an umpire on the Polo Grounds in New York. The fans were "riding" the Babe at the time because he was not hitting, so when he lost his head and wrangled with an umpire over a close decision at second, Ban Johnson was lenient and gave the swat king but a day's layoff, but fined him $100.

GOES AFTER UMPIRE AGAIN.

On Monday, however, when he disputed with Umpire Dineen in Cleveland, Big Ban got mad and wired the Bambino to lay off for three days. Ruth ignored the suspension yesterday, and appeared in uniform during practice of the teams in Cleveland. When Umpire Dineen came out to start the game, he indicated the way out to the idol of the fans. As Dineen's extended right hand pointed toward the clubhouse exit Ruth reproached him and is alleged to have spoken vilely to him. Dineen whipped off his mask and they squared off to fight when Tris Speaker, Stuffy McInnis and O'Neil, Cleveland catcher, interfered and led Ruth off the field.

In his report to President Johnson, Dineen stated that Ruth repeated the vile epithet he had used the day before to him, adding several more profane phrases for good measure.

"There is no player in the American League who can call one of my umpires like that or conduct himself in such a disgraceful manner on the ball field and get away with it," said Mr. Johnson today after he had notified Ruth that two days had been added to the original three days' suspension sentence.

"I want Babe Ruth to understand that right now. He is going to behave himself or I'll keep him out of the game the rest of the Summer.

BABE RUTH PASTOR IS HELD AS BIGAMIST

Arrested in California on Boston Charges, Said to Have Five Wives

Donald B. Stewart or Robert Allan McClaren Browne, a minister wanted in Boston for bigamy, grand larceny and conspiracy, was arrested today in Sierra Marie, near Los Angeles.

With him was Barbara Jones of Mt. Carmel, Pa. She is the latest of six wives he is alleged to have married, divircing but one. She was also placed under arrest and will be brought to Boston with the former preacher, who was also active as a temperance worker.

Steps will be taken by Boston police to arrange for the extradition of both the man and woman immediately.

According to private detectives who made the arrest Stewart as the Rev. Robert Allen McClaren Browne, was pastor of several churches in Dundee Lake, N. J., and Patterson, N. J. As a minister he is said to have contracted bigamous marriages with several women, defrauding them of their savings and then deserting them.

The former Presbyterian preacher is also wanted in New York, Detroit and Indianapolis. In Indianapolis he is under indictment for bigamy and is also wanted, police say, for forgery, the Aetna Savings and Trust Company having been defrauded of $1,250 on a forged check.

LOST PASTORATE.

In 1918 he married Barbara Jones, arrested with him.

In the following year he was ordained a minister in New York city, and assigned to his first pastorate at Dundee Lake. He lost this church, it is said, following the suicide of a woman he is alleged to have been intimate with.

In 1920 he married Ethel M. Turner Oshalgerston of New York. He is alleged to have deserted her after he had spent her money.

In February, 1921, he married Bertha Grannis in Detroit. Her mother charged him with having swindled her out of several thousands of dollars by bogus checks. He then disappeared but turned up in Boston in September of the same year and married Norma Ehrenseller. He is alleged to have taken $,000 in cash from her.

POSED AS REFORMER.

It was this marriage and his disappearance following the complaint of the women of the theft of their savings that started Pinkerton detectives on his trail. Besides all these wives, detectives say he has a divorced wife and three children living in New Jersey.

The Pinkertons in tracing the former minister's record discovered they say, that he had held brief pastorates in Texas and California, since his residence in New Jersey.

In the West, they say, he was known as an ardent reformer laying claim to having cleaned up the Tenderloin in Chicago and was held in high esteem.

TWO LYNN YOUTHS ARE HELD AFTER HOLD-UP

John F. Casey, No. 103 New Park street, and Melvin T. Paige, No. 8 Ellis street, both of Lynn, were arraigned today in West Lynn, charged with robbery.

According to James Witogen of No. 4 River street, West Lynn, the two youths held him up shortly after midnight and robbed him of several dollars. Witogen told the police that the young men had previously visited his poolroom and asked credit for cigarettes, and upon his refusal, he said, they threatened to "get him." Witogen said a third man participated in the holdup, but escaped.

Denunciation of the acts of those Senators and Representatives who purchased stocks affected by the passage of the Boston Elevated Public Control act, was the outstanding feature of a report filed today by the Suffolk County Grand Jury, which has been investigating charges of corruption in connection with the enactment of the law.

The report declares that "while there is no evidence upon which" the grand jurors could "bring an indictment against any person or persons," the Grand Jury takes this occasion to call to "public attention and to express their own condemnation of indiscreet practices" by certain members of the General Court at the time of the passage of the Public Control Act and the Cambridge Tunnel Bill.

SCORED IN REPORT.

"We refer most particularly to loans made to members of the Legislature by the Fidelity Trust Company and to investments made by members of the Legislature in street railway stocks at a time so closely related to the passage of the street railway legislation as to afford a basis for reasonable suspicion in the public mind."

"A number of senators and representatives," says the report, "placed themselves in a position in which they might readily find it difficult to render their constituents and the State that unbiased service to which both are entitled."

Among the witnesses summoned before the Grand Jury during the investigation, which has taken several weeks and a number of secret hearings, were Mayor James M. Curley, members of the Senate and the House, newspaper men, attorneys, public accountants, business men and bankers.

The investigation was based on the testimony given at the time of the probe conducted by the joint committee of the Legislature into the similar charges made by Martin M. Lomasney on the floor of the House of Representatives.

NAMED AS BUYERS.

At the legislative hearing it was brought out that fifteen members of the 1918 General Court had invested in various stocks more or less directly affected by the passage of the public control act. Eight of these were Senators and seven Representatives. Eight Senators and six Representatives of the 1919 General Court also admitted or were shown to have followed similar tactics.

The 1918 members, who bought stock in the Boston Elevated were given as: John E. Buck of Chelsea, James F. Cavanagh of Everett, James E. MacPherson of Framingham, Edwin T. McKnight, president of the Senate, and former vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, K. L. Nash of Weymouth, Walter B. McLane of Fall River, Fred J. Burrell of Medford, former State Treasurer, Benjamin G. Collins of Edgartown, John L. Donovan of Boston, Dr. J. H. McAllister of Lee, Bion T. Wheeler of Springfield, George A. Whitney of Clinton, Harold L. Fenerin of Wellesley and Edward F. McLaughlin of Brookton.

The eight Senators and the six representatives were bought stock in the Bay State Street Railway also affected by the public control act were given as Senators Beck, Cavanagh, MacPherson, McKnight, McLane, Milaughlin, Nash and Perrin, and Representatives Burrell, Donovan, Pierce, Andrew P. Doyle of New Bedford, Simon Swig of Boston and George M. Worrell of North Attleboro. Swig was vice-president of the closed Tremont Trust Company.

"Pussyfoot" to Sail on British Ship Just Because--Oh, Well!

New York, June 21 (By International News Service).—It would naturally be thought that "licker" is about the worst thing in the eyes of "Pussyfoot" Johnson, but natural thought is wrong, as "Pussyfoot" explained today.

The worst thing in the world, in his opinion, is "bootleg licker," and "bootleg licker" makes him "damned mad."

And because "Pussyfoot" is convinced that American ships sell "bootleg licker" on the high seas, he is determined to sail for Europe tomorrow on an English vessel, for English vessels at least "are honest about dispensing" the joyous fluid.

"Pussyfoot" was good-naturedly vigorous in his condemnation of Shipping Board vessels and their "damned bootleg licker" being sold on those "damned bootleg scows."

"It makes me so damned mad," he concluded, "that I can't do anything but swear."

PATRON OUT FOR DIST. ATTORNEY

William J. Patron, Boston lawyer, who was prominent in former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier's campaign for Mayor, today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for District Attorney of Suffolk County.

Patron's decision to run provided the political mystery of the day. Mr. Pelletier, himself, is in the field, according to his announced plans, and if both stay in it is assumed they will draw more or less from the same sources of support.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, City Councillor Ford, and Governor's Councillor Foley, are certain to stay in to the finish. O'Brien's friends feel that the number of candidates against him removes any doubt of his re-election.

TWO ARRESTS IN $5,000 THEFT OF STATIONERY

Theft of $5,000 worth of stationery, extending over several months, at the F. W. Barry-Beal Company, stationers, No. 198 Washington street, were cleared up, it is believed, with the arrest today of Richard L. Smith, twenty years old, of No. 78 Washington street, Malden, and Valentine K. Nickerson, forty-two years old, of No. 24 Willard avenue, Medford, by Detective Walter L. Higgins of the Burns International Detective Agency and Special Officers John J. Manning and John Bresnahan of Station 2.

DRUGGISTS ARE FINED.

The three detectives have been conducting an investigation into alleged looting at the stationery plant for several weeks.

The arrest of Smith brought about a confession from him, according to the police, which implicated A. C. Fliegelman and J. W. Fliegelman, proprietors of the Sheldon pharmacy, at No. 370 Main street, Malden. The two Fliegelman brothers were arrested and appeared in Malden Court today, charged with receiving stolen property, and were fined $50 each.

Much of the stolen property was recovered at the Fliegelman pharmacy, according to the Burns Agency officials.

OTHER ARRESTS DUE.

Smith also implicated Nickerson, and when the latter was arrested he told the police that considerable of the loot had been sold to alleged "fences" in Cambridge, Boston and Malden. Arrests of these alleged "fences" are promised by the police after further investigation.

Smith was employed at the Barry-Beal Company when arrested, and Nickerson was an employe of the concern up to two weeks ago.

RENEW EFFORT TO END STRIKE

That renewed efforts will be made to prevail upon the Lawrence textile strikers and the mill owners to put their feet under the same table, and to compose the differences that have kept at least 12,000 men and women out of work about nineteen weeks, was today announced by General E. Leroy Sweetser, chairman of the State Board of Labor and Industries.

The attempt will be made as the result of the mandate given the department by the legislature in the closing hours of the session.

The legislature ordered a thorough investigation to be made of the causes of the strike, of the rates of wages being paid in the Southern mills, and whether there was any justifiable reason for the owners to order such a drastic wage cut. It also ordered the department to employ every reasonable means to prevail upon both sides to reach an "amicable settlement."

Chairman Edward Fisher of the Arbitration Board, a branch of the department, said today that the workers have all along announced their willingness to arbitrate, but all efforts to arrange a basis of arbitration have been unavailing.

Despite the past failures, Sweetser said today the department will renew the efforts to effect a compromise.

of these coupons (not from the same day, but dated consecutively for three days) and present them with ten cents, you will be entitled to a free excursion to the pleasantest place in all New England.

There are absolutely no strings attached to this offer. You'll remember that the Mother's Day Outing of the Boston American in the years before the war brought joy to hundreds of women and children who got an outing they could otherwise perhaps not have afforded.

The war came along and put a temporary stop to this famous event. But now it is to be renewed, beginning next Monday and lasting five days. Instead of giving one outing, The American, with the cooperation of the Nantasket Beach Steamship Company, will give TEN OUTINGS TO NANTASKET BEACH.

There are to be two trips a day, starting next Monday and ending next Friday. That means ten trips on steamboats of the Nantasket Company. Each steamboat has a capacity of 1,500. We'll be able to give outings to 15,000 women and children.

If you clip the coupon in today's American, and tomorrow's and Friday's, you can go along on the first trip, which is on Monday morning. If you should miss the first boat, there'll be another on Monday. There'll be room for 3,000 kiddies and their guardians Monday.

If you can't go on Monday, collect the coupons printed Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and come along on Tuesday. Or clip the coupons on Saturday, Monday and Tuesday and get in on the Wednesday trip.

No woman may bring more than three children on a trip. No child over the age of fifteen is eligible to participate in the excursion. Otherwise, it's free for all.

Remember, the coupons must be dated consecutively, and three of them must go along with your dime.

We expect to be able, before the trip starts, to announce further details and pleasant surprises of the excursion.

WRESTLING CHAMP WEDS DAUGHTER OF BANKER

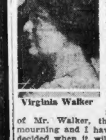
Renato Gardini, mat idol and Olympic champion, was married to Miss Edith Di Pietro, daughter of Andrew A. Di Pietro, the North End banker, in St. Leonard's Church, before one of the largest gatherings that ever witnessed a marriage ceremony in the North End.

Renato Gardini

Scores of friends who had cheered the wrestler on to victory filled the edifice, and even two hours before the ceremony there was no longer standing room in the church. When the bridal party, at the head of a long line of automobiles swung into Prince street and drew up in front of the church, they were given hearty cheers.

ILLINOIS ATHLETE TO WED TOPSFIELD GIRL

Otto Dalton Mowey, forty-two years old, of the Illinois Athletic Club will marry Miss Virginia Walker, twenty-eight years old, of Topsfield, whose father, Johnson L. Walker, formerly vice-president of the Exchange Trust Company, died in the West recently.



Virginia Walker

"The ceremony will not take place for some time," Miss Walker told the American. "Owing to the death of Mr. Walker, the family is in mourning and I have not definitely decided when it will take place."

CLOSE DOORS ON CROWD AT BOYS' FUNERAL

Police reserves under Captain Jeremiah Gallivan were forced to close the doors of the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Tremont street, Roxbury, today with 1,000 persons unable to get in to attend the burial services of the four Roxbury boys killed a the Boston & Maine railroad crossing, Peabody, on Sunday as they were driving to mass.

The church was jammed.

Victims were Joseph C. McCarthy of No. 130 Fisher avenue; Mathew J. Connelly of No. 1635 Tremont street, Thomas J. Hart of No. 15 Oregon street and William J. Buckley of No. 7 Iroquois street.

They were instantly killed when an automobile they were riding in crashed into a fast freight train.

COMPANIONS IN HOSPITAL.

Two companions were badly injured and are in a Peabody hospital. They are Lepnard Coppenrath of No. 1674½ Tremont street and Charles Lewis of No. 37 St. Alphonsus street.

A solemn requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of the souls of the four victims. Their flower-covered caskets stood side by side before the altar of the church. Sobbing was repeatedly heard through the service.

Celebrant of the mass was the Very Rev. William B. Kenna, C. S. P. R., assisted by Rev. Richard Keenan, deacon; Rev. William Murray, sub-deacon, and Rev. John Scully, master of ceremonies.

THOUSANDS VIEW CORTEGES.

Thousands viewed the funeral cortèges as they moved to the church in four files of hearses and carriages. White caskets were carried into the edifice, the Mission Church Field Band, of which Hart and Buckley were members, played a dirge.

The auto truck which Buckley had been driver for of a downtown department store, moved directly behind the hearses bearing the boy's body, and following service was driven to the grave.

Delegations were present from the Roxbury Council, Knights of Columbus, St. Alphonsus Association, and various business houses where the boys had been employed.

The Prince and the Princess both called at the palace today to thank the Emperor for sanctioning the marriage.

The Prince is twenty-one years old and has been on the throne since Emperor Yoshihito's illness. Princess Nagako comes from the ancient house of Kunih No-Miya.

The delegates are from textile centers throughout New England and New York State. President James Tansey called the gathering to order. Mayor James H. Kay of Fall River followed Tansey to the speaker's stand. Committees were appointed today and the gathering will take up matters of vital importance, it is said tomorrow.

FILM STARS IN RHODE ISLAND SCANDAL

Providence, June 21.—Rhode Island's divorce scandal is to be heard to the world and steps taken to make the guilty suffer.

This became evident today with announcement that the Grand Jury, which is investigating the situation that resulted in an average number of divorces in the local courts reaching nearly 25 a day, had returned two public and five secret indictments and that more may be expected.

Pearl White.

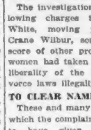
The authorities are determined to end the impression swiftly gaining ground that Providence, R. I., is the "Reno of the East."

The investigation was started following charges that Miss Pearl White, moving picture actress, Crane Wilbur, screen star, and a score of other prominent men and women had taken advantage of the liberality of the Rhode Island divorce laws illegally.

TO CLEAR NAME OF STATE.

These and many other divorces in which the complainants were alleged to have given purely fictitious Rhode Island addresses in order to establish legal residence in the State, resulted in a movement by the Bar Association to clear the good name of Rhode Island of the stigma.

That investigation has resulted so far in the indictment of Harry Gottschalk, alias Martin Benson, alias "Duggie" Stuart, well known British sportsman and bookmaker. He is accused of having given an address at No. 88 Whitmarsh street, this city.



Wilbur Crane.

He is not known there. Gottschalk, who is better known in Europe, "Duggie" Stuart, is celebrated on both sides of the Atlantic as a bookmaker and gambler.

He came to Rhode Island to divorce his wife, who was Maris Benson, a London music hall actress.

The other public indictment filed by the Grand Jury charges Harry Myers, who claims to be a cousin of Mrs. Gottschalk, with having claimed as his home No. 173 Broadway, Pawtucket. That number is an ornamental grass plot.

Another witness in the Gottschalk divorce case was Harry Benson, a clerk in the employ of Thomas J. Gorney, attorney in the case. He has not been indicted, so far as is known.

State officials today declared that the indictment of Gottschalk and Myers undoubtedly means that the Grand Jury is determined to make a clean sweep of the whole situation and "set Rhode Island right with the country."

"The conditions here have been outrageous," declared one official. "Why, in one week recently three hundred divorces were ground out in the divorce mills. Not even Reno could touch that record.

"There was no need for Former Senator Hollis of New Hampshire to go to Bulgaria for his divorce. He should have come to Rhode Island. He would have been treated right here."

Mr. Gottschalk, who is better known as Martin Benson, told the court he had lived in this State for ten years. This, the officials declared, is also false.

He was granted a divorce in April from Marie Cruise Gottschalk. The suit was uncontested and was heard on depositions before L. W. Horton, master in chancery, who was counsel for Pearl White, Crane Wilbur and Mrs. Lowell Sherman in their divorce actions.

Mr. Gottschalk charged that his wife wilfully deserted him.

discover. There are mines under the waters more valuable, probably, than any ever found on land. There are oil wells under the ocean, below the salt water.

And, after all, exploring on this earth is only the beginning. The earth is our little back yard. The real territory that interests human beings is the entire visible universe, and that is big.

The French astronomer, Flammarion, six flights up, no elevator in his little flat across the Seine, said to this writer, "We are on the threshold only of knowledge. We used to count a few stars in the Pleiades, now the microscope counts 45,000 suns for us in that little group of cosmic fireflies." Plenty of room for the explorers.

MRS. JACK SANBORN'S STORY CHARGES HUSBAND WITH THREATS

BRIDE IS FOUND IN NEW YORK

She has not been kidnaped from the house of her young husband, Jack Sanborn, nor has she been hidden away from him, as he has made it appear. She does refuse to make her home with him. She charges him with responsibility for extreme physical cruelty and for a spiritual cruelty that is far more brutal and harmful than any pain that might be inflicted on the body.

Mrs. Sanborn discovered herself to the Boston American that she might openly meet the terrible things that have been whispered.

"My uncle," she said, "is the finest man that ever lived. He despised Jack Sanborn and tried to keep me from marrying him. I threatened to elope. When I became of age my uncle gave in—there was no opposing us. Jack is a lounge lizard, skilled in the arts of amatory hypnosis. His campaign to marry me, as the ward of a wealthy uncle, was irresistable. It was not until after he won me that I realized my uncle's wealth and not my own heart was the prize.

"The club which he would use to beat out a fortune for himself was one that no honest man or woman would resort to. Scandal is a curious weapon. Any one may launch it. But no one may tell where it will strike.

"UNCLE WON'T FORGET."

"Jack Sanborn's weapon has struck the only man who ever befriended Jack Sanborn. His father means nothing to him. His mother means little. The one person who tried to raise Jack from the position of hired dancing instructor to silly women to the respectability of his early family from which he fell, was my uncle, Bob Montgomery. Had Uncle Bob taken a ratlesnake in his hand he would have been in less danger.

"It is on behalf of Uncle Bob, not myself, that I have come to the Boston American. "He must live in New York and Boston and face curious eyes. I may go away to Europe and forget.

"It is possible to do a great injury to a woman by whispering to acquaintances that you protest her to be virtuous. Great, but not irreparable. Memory, after all is the only thing that hurts. A woman has an easy forgetterry.

"But the harm the shameful harm that has been done my Uncle Bob will never be forgotten by him. I thought he would never forgive me for my part, innocent as it was, in Jack Sanborn's plot.

"But as I lay on my sick bed, recovering from the bruises which Jack Sanborn had given me, I heard Uncle Bob say to mother, 'Forgive her? I hereby take the solemn oath to take this poor girl's bruised fle the body on my shoulders like a cross and pursue that scoundrel to the gates of hell.'

"BELIEVE ME, HE'LL DO IT."

She said reconciliation was out of the question. She laughed at published reports that Jack Sanborn had left her, and others to the effect that she has been "spirited away" or "kidnaped" by her uncle.

"While they have been circulating those stories that I was in a sanitarium or hospital," said Mrs. Sanborn, "I have been living quietly for six weeks at the home of a girl friend, who is classmate at boarding school. Her father is a wealthy manufacturer and they live in a suburb of New York.

"I have been there constantly ever since I left Jack Sanborn on May 16, and he and his family and his lawyers know it. Yet they have seen fit to make my disappearance deeply mysterious and to cloud it with all sorts of invective and insuendo.

DEFENDS UNCLE.

"I don't care what they say about me. I am thoroughly incensed though, at what they have hinted and charged about my uncle. It's a pack of lies.

"Uncle Bob has been more than a mother and father to me. He has given me more than money and luxury. The very finest influences of my life have come since he adopted me, since father and mother gave me to him.

"I never attended church until I went to live with him. He introduced me to the very finest people in Boston. True they were middle-aged, much older than I, but they were the very nicest folk any one could meet. And, if I had only taken his advice and married one of the very noble men he had picked out for me, I would not be facing this ordeal today.

"He warned me against marrying Jack Sanborn. He told me he wasn't good enough for me, but I was young and impulsive and didn't know any better. Jack turned my head, but it did not take me long to discover my mistakes.

"And what an awakening! He was lazy. His lacked ambition. All he cared for was dancing and spending money—my uncle's money. When Uncle Bob cut us off Jack forced me to write that letter. My uncle and his lawyers coaxed and teased me to tell them how I got those bruises on my neck and arms. It was at the Sanborn home in Winchester when he and I were alone, and when he told me he'd kill me if I didn't do as he bid.

CHARGES THREATS.

"That was not the only time he threatened to kill me. He did on other occasions. I finally got so that I not only feared, but abhorred him. I shuddered when he came near me. I had a girl friend come to banish my terror and when matters became unbearable I left him and came to my friend's home in New York and they have been lovely to me.

"I don't know what he did with all that money. It seemed to drip through his fingers. He was forever hounding me to induce Uncle Bob to give us money, more money and more money. He kept dinging it in my ears every day and every hour of the day, and I got it until I was ashamed, disgusted.

"He hasn't paid for my wedding ring yet. He had a special one made. See, this one, platinum circled with diamonds. I think every time I look at it that the manufacturer who made it especially for me is still waiting for his money.

"He bought the engagement ring he gave me with my uncle's money. It cost $1,350. Finally his father, Caleb Sanborn, was so humiliated when he heard it that he reimbursed my uncle. But that is the only item that was ever paid back to my uncle.

"Jack took my uncle's platinum studs from my uncle's dresser and his watch chain made of costly matched pearls and wore them at our wedding and never returned them.

BACHELOR DINNER.

"He went to my uncle's tailor, in Boston, and ordered his wedding clothes, including business suits, a dress suit, two overcoats and the like and had them all charged to Uncle Bob. He bought his wedding neckties and shirts and hosiery and charged them all to Uncle Bob.

"He gave a bachelor dinner a few nights before the wedding. It was held at the Copley Plaza. He entertained fourteen of his friends. He asked me to get him liquor from Uncle Bob's supply. I did. The spread cost a pretty sum, and he charged it to my uncle.

"They had such a gay revel that Mr. Delmonte said he would have turned them all out if he hadn't known that it was given by the fiance of Mrs. Montgomery's niece. They broke glassware and created quite a disturbance.

"He didn't even pay the minister for marrying us. We were married at Arlington Street Church on March 18 last by the Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham. Just before the ceremony Jack said he hadn't been able to locate his father and wanted to know if I would ask Uncle Bob for $100 to pay the minister.

"I went to Uncle Bob and told him what Jack wanted. Uncle Bob replied, 'Send the ——— to me and let him ask me himself.' He did and Uncle Bob gave him the $100, which he in turn gave the officiating clergyman.

"My wedding dress, which was gorgeous, was taken by Jack's folks, and although I have made repeated demands for it I have been unable to get it back.

LAVISH WITH TIPS.

"My uncle paid all our travel and hotel expenses on our wedding trip to Bermuda. Not content with that Jack kept writing for money and making drafts on the New York hotel. While in New York before we sailed for Bermuda, Jack ordered a Swedish masseur to our apartments every morning for treatment. Then he summoned one of the hotel barbers and had a shave, facial massage and shampoo. He had his hair trimmed every day.

"He was lavish with tips, paid with my uncle's money. When we got to Bermuda he sent a cablegram to my uncle asking for $150. He signed my name to that cablegram without my knowledge. He got the money. He couldn't draw on the Hamilton Hotel there as he did in New York.

"When we returned to New York he began drawing $50 and $75 so frequently that my uncle finally shut off on him until we got back to Boston.

"My uncle gave a six-cylinder Packard roadster. Jack told me his father would pay half. My uncle gave his half in cash and his father gave a note. Jack still sports around in that car. He kept it at the garage where my uncle keeps his car and he charged up garage storage, gas and tires to Uncle Bob.

"When he learned that Uncle Bob had instructed the man at the garage to hold the car when he brought it in, Jack came around all right and filled the tank with gasoline at Uncle Bob's expense.

"I tried to induce him to take up some employment. I told him Uncle Bob would gladly place him in a position if he showed sufficient interest and ambition, but he said he didn't care to work. There was a fellow named 'Mindee' he knew, who I heard was a member of the underworld.

"Jack was very devoted to me before marriage and during our honeymoon, but he suddenly changed when Uncle Bob stopped giving us money. That made him furious.

"He never seemed to have any other girl. I heard him telephone and ask how a colored man was getting along. I thought that strange. I asked him about it but got no satisfaction.

"He told me he expected to fall heir to $100,000. I learned that was not true. It developed that he would get $10,000, but that his debts would far exceed that sum.

"But enough of Jack Sanborn. My sole interest at present is in my uncle, Robert Montgomery. I cannot believe I am to think that he should be dragged into this and made to suffer after all he did for me and for Jack, too, for that matter.

"I want to tell Uncle Bob that my side of it is all him, to stand by his side and challenge his accusers and make them take back every syllable of untruth.

LOYAL TO UNCLE.

"I want to tell him that I am eager to give him back all these costly jewels if he needs them to help fight this calumny. I know he would not accept one of them. I know that he will tell me not to worry my little head, that he will defend me as my mother would defend me. If it costs his last dollar. But I want to help all in my power nevertheless.

"It is for that and that only that I consent to give this interview to a representative of the Boston American. I wish to publish the truth to the world."

Mrs. Sanborn is a pronounced blonde. She is slender. She has the build of Irene Castle and her grace of manner and movement. She has had her golden tresses bobbed since she came to New York. She told the writer that she has never tried to conceal herself.

She and the friends with whom she has been stopping for six weeks have attended the theatres and dined and danced at the fashionable hotels.

Eleanor Montgomery Sanborn has matured somewhat since her marital troubles, say her intimates here. But, being eighteen, she is still vibrant with the joy of living and she still worships her Uncle Bob.

Cantaloupes 2 for 3 Cents; or Half for 15 to 25 Cents

Increased acreage has flooded New York and Eastern markets with the toothsome melons. Ninety-one carloads dumped into the metropolis sent cantaloupes down to 25 cents for a crate of eighteen melons.

SALTONSTALL TO GRILL LAWHORN

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt has granted authority for District Attorney Saltonstall of Middlesex County to question Private John D. Lawhorn, U. S. Marine Corps, regarding the murder in April of Ralph G. Brewster, Winchester station agent. This authorization reached the Charlestown Navy Yard today, addressed to Colonel A. T. Marix, commanding the marines at the station.

It allows the questioning to be done without the presence of a naval or marine officer, and at the convenience of the district attorney.

Lawhorn was accused of the killing of Brewster by John Tindall, now in the Cambridge jail awaiting trial on a charge of larceny. Lawhorn at the time was on duty at Quantico, Va., target range, but was later brought back to Boston and is now in the Navy Yard brig waiting developments in the case.

He has denied all knowledge of the murder of the station agent, and fellow-marines have testified that at the time of the murder Lawhorn was on duty as sentry at the Navy Yard gate.

FEAR FOR SHIPS AS GRAVES FOG SIGNAL FAILS

Efforts are being made to hasten repairs and the lightkeeper hopes to have it going again soon.

The main engine gave out first, after the fog horn had been sounding since yesterday. The emergency engine was brought into use, but that gave out before the main engine could be repaired.

As the signal is located in one of the most dangerous spots on the coast, shipping men fear some vessel may strike one of the many ledges in the vicinity if repairs are not made quickly.

The fog, which settled down over the whole North Atlantic seaboard yesterday, grew denser today and blanketed Boston Harbor. Many coastwise vessels arrived behind schedule. No deep water vessels came into port, although several are due, including the Alaskan from Pacific ports, the McKeesport from Rotterdam, the Minnehaha from Hamburg and the Niagara from Bordeaux.

They are believed to be anchored off the lightship, waiting for pilots.

Thursday will be fair and warmer, promises the weather man, although there is no hope for a let-up of the cloudy weather and showers for this afternoon and tonight. A shift of wind from the Southwest to Northwest is expected to bring the change.

The Merrimac River is running within a few inches of the record of the Spring thaw season, and has risen rapidly during the last twenty-four hours, as a result of the heavy rain which swept the river valley yesterday.

Burlington, Vt., was the warmest place in New England today, with a high mark of 66, and Eastport had the coldest temperature with 54.

BISHOP PERRY URGES STUDY OF R. I. STRIKE

Wickford, R. I., June 21.—The duty of the church in labor controversies is to hear both sides, "learn what the truth of the situation is and then face it bravely," said Bishop De Wolf Perry, of the Episcopal Diocese of Rhode Island, in addressing the National Conference of Episcopal Social Service Workers here today. Referring to the strike situation in Rhode Island, Bishop Perry said: "The chief opportunity and responsibility of the church in the situation her is a careful and sympathetic study of the entire problem. The right is not all on either side."

This Trolley Doesn't Meet All Trains; No, Not Any

Recently Palos purchased an obsolete street car from the Eastern Massachusetts Railway and converted it into a home.

Today a thoroughly pipped individual boarded the Sankiwaics manse, took the best upholstered chair and instructed Palos to let him off at Providence. Deaf to Palos' protest, the pickled passenger asked if he might smoke, tendered his fare and, muttering complaints about the poor service of the line, settled down to peaceful slumber.

He was aroused by a constable, who refused to give him a transfer.

FIND HOME FOR NEW BEDFORD CASTAWAY

New Bedford, June 21.—Osmund Erickson, weak and emaciated from exposure to the sea which cast him up aboard a battered schooner hulk on the West Island beach yesterday, found a safe refuge in the Mariner's Home.

Arraigned in District Court before Judge Milliken to answer to a charge of vagrancy, Erickson answered questions incoherently, and added little to the information he first gave about himself.

Judge Milliken directed that Erickson be sent to the home for care, and that he be taken later to a sailors' home in Boston.

When found by a Summer visitor Erickson was sitting prone on the shore. Not far out was the battered hulk of a thirty-foot schooner which carried a jury rig of old planks and a few tattered clothes for sails. When the police went aboard they found the craft half full of water. The only food was a can of peanut butter.

In court today Erickson talked incorrectly of having come from Tarrytown, N. Y. He told Judge Milliken he was married and on his way to Portland, Me., to visit his wife. Yesterday he said he was unmarried and that his only relatives were in Norway.

The Boston American made this discovery today, following the announcement that the fall in the Sanborn fortunes made it necessary for Helen to secure employment as a teacher of horseback riding at Lake Champlain.

TROUBLE OF ALL KINDS.

Following the separation, the history of the Sanborns has been a succession of troubles of all kinds.

Miss Sanborn's suit was filed some time ago in the Middlesex County Superior Court and is pending at East Cambridge. She is represented by Attorney Robert A. Young of Boston.

Helen charges that her father "converted to his own use" several hundred volumes of rare books and manuscripts which had been willed her by her grandmother, Mrs. Helen Sanborn. In an answer the father declares that the books in question are not the property of his daughter, and that if there are any missing it is because of her own negligence and carelessness.

Included among the books represented by the suit are the following: Eight volumes of Shakespeare, printed in 1803; eight volumes of Shakespeare, printed in 1858; four rare volumes of Leigh Hunt's works; Novels and Tales, by Goethe; six volumes of the works of George W. Curtis; "Poets and Poetry of Europe," by Longfellow; Lord Kingsborough's "Antiquities of Mexico," comprising facsimiles of ancient Mexican paintings and hieroglyphics; "Chronicum Nurembergense, auctore Hartmanno Schedel. incipit' Regnatrum Lituis operi libri cronicarum in figuris et imagibus abinicio nuidi, cisto princeps." got this letter, with over 2,250 quaint and spirited wood cuts. This dates back to 1493.

There is also a volume said to have come down from the library of Francis I., King of France, on "The Praise of Folly." There is a manuscript on the Maya and Quiche Tubes and Natural History of Quatsonala. This once belonged to Bassour du Bouborg. Two valuable volumes of Shakespeare, reproduced in facsimile from the edition of 1623, are also in the lot. In addition to these, Miss Sanborn claims there are close to a thousand other volumes of fiction, history and travel.

WINS SECOND DIVORCE FROM STATIRS

Hazel Statirs finally got her divorce.

Hazel is the piquant Back Bay beauty who recently told how she gave a jealous hubby two chances, but declared "Never again."

She lives with her mother at No. 678 Tremont street.

Twice Hazel and her husband were reconciled after divorce proceedings were started. Then separations followed.

They were married in February, 1915.

In 1919, after their first quarrel, Statirs sued his pretty wife for divorce. They became reconciled before the case reached court. Then followed bills and reconciliations in dazzling rapidity. Mrs. Statirs in 1921 being granted a divorce, only to become reconciled to her husband before the decree became absolute.

They met in a downtown restaurant.

"George won me in a whirlwind courtship," said Hazel.

ROXBURY THIEF CHASE WRECKS TWO AUTOS

Shots were fired, two automobiles were wrecked and an arrest was made in a police chase after a stolen automobile today.

Early today Frank Cohen of No. 21 Fernboro street, Roxbury, telephoned the police that his sedan had been stolen from in front of his home. A short time later Patrolman Sharkey of Roxbury Crossing station saw the automobile.

Recognizing the license number, he stepped in its path and ordered the driver to stop. Instead of decreasing his speed, the driver put on the gas. Sharkey commandeered another automobile and pursued the stolen car up Columbus avenue, overtaking it at Jackson square. Sharkey found two men in the car when it stopped. He started to question them, when the car started again. The policeman drew his revolver and fired at it.

As the stolen car started up Centre street at high speed a truck of the Ward Baking Company was crossing Hogg's bridge. The two automobiles crashed. Fred W. Craig, driver of the truck, was thrown to the street. He was later taken to City Hospital, where it was found he had a broken arm.

When Sharkey arrived he found that Minden's companion had escaped. Both cars were badly damaged. Minden was arraigned in Roxbury Court charged with the larceny of an automobile.

AGAINST MILITARY WORK IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Minneapolis, June 20.—A proposal to eliminate military training from Minneapolis high schools was carried by a vote of 23,678 to 23,154, at the primaries, according to complete unofficial figures. Final decision rests with the board of education, and the vote was taken to get an expression of public opinion.

Bay State Building Boom Booming Right Along

The building boom went booming merrily along in May, according to the returns from thirty-three cities of the State tabulated today by the State Department of Labor and Industries.

The total value of building permits granted last month was $14,944,323.

In May a year ago the total was $8,197,824.

The department figures the increase was 141 per cent.

A. F. L. TO PROBE HARVARD BAN UPON JEWS

Cincinnati, June 21.—Without discussion or opposition, the American Federation of Labor Convention today adopted a resolution favoring an investigation of the "alleged discriminatory action which is said to be contemplated by Harvard University to bar admission of Jews as students."

The resolution declared the Federation's disapproval of "any departure from true liberal tradition," and condemned as "un-American any policy which may deny to any racial or religious group equal opportunities for education."

The resolution specified the Federation should cause the investigation to be made and that the officers, if they found that a ban were to be placed on Jews, should take "such action as they deem feasible to remove the discrimination contemplated and to assure equal opportunities to all, regardless of race and religious affiliation."

McCORMICK IS "FORTY YEARS YOUNGER"

Fifty-one years rested lightly on the shoulders of Harold F. McCormick today. The Worcester magnate felt the urge of youth. He longed to grab a baseball bat, romp to the vacant lot and knock a ball out sail over the board fence. He said so. Mr. McCormick made this enthusiastic admission to Horace Wade, boy writer. Horace is fourteen and the main thing that occupied his mind as he slipped by the "ironclad" guards in the Wesley Memorial Hospital, Chicago, up to Mr. McCormick's suite was, "Gee, what a great day for a ball game!"

Here is his story of the interview:

By HORACE WADE.

Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

Make me a child again, just for tonight."

I hummed to myself as I looked at the dingy, granite stones of Wesley Memorial Hospital, and wondered whether I could get over the hurdles and see Harold F. McCormick, who was stepping in the foot tracks of romantic old Ponce de Leon in his quest for the Fountain of Youth.

My school history tells me that Ponce de Leon lost the trail to the Fountain of Youth, lost it in the blossoming orange groves of Florida. Will Harold F. McCormick find it again?

That was what I thought as I hurried up the cold stone steps of the frowning old hospital where broken folks go to get mended.

I dashed up the stairs and came out on the second floor. Here I saw a number of doctors, puffed up as could be since they had a multimillionaire on the floor. I eyed them over from head to foot, then I shot my head, "Nope," I sighed, "no luck here." For above the pressed-out legs and hand on hips were faces cold as steel. Then I was glad I was a kid. Getting down on my knees I crawled under them. "PERSERVERANCE WINS."

"Look, a mouse!" cried one nurse, spying me, and fainted. But I was already at the end of the hall and knocked at a door.

"Come in," rang out a cheerful voice from the interior, and I slowly stuck my head in the door.

"Mr. McCormick?" I asked.

He stuck his head to one side, cocky-like, and answered:

"That's me! But who are you?"

"Me? I'm Horace Wade, and I sent you my book and I want an interview."

"Nix, Horace. No interview for me."

"Aw, yes," I remonstrated. "I need one."

"All right, I'll talk to you, then. Perseverance wins."

And he sat up in bed and pulled his bedclothes up around his neck. But they wouldn't stay there and every minute or two he had to pull them up again.

He coughed nervously, swallowed hard and looked at me.

FEELING FINE.

"I'm afraid," he said, "that neither of us know what to say."

"You're looking fine," I said. Folks, I wasn't fooling either. He did look swell. And young? He's taken forty years off his life."

"I'm feeling fine." And he thumped his chest. "Horace," he then went on, "I've been following your stories with interest. I liked the last Judge Gary one best. Say, I'd have given a million dollars to have played ball with you."

"We'll go out and play together some time," I ventured.

"Honest, cross your heart and hope to die."

"Yep," I replied.

"Fine, you're a brick."

Then came a moment's silence.

"Well, Horace," he then exclaimed, "I wish you lots of luck, heaps of it, and I'm going to read you book too, and"—— His rosy face grew ashen and he fell over to one side and feigned slumber.

"Why," I started and glanced up. There was his nurse. I gulped twice.

"Hello," I grinned sheepishly.

McCORMICK A "MARVEL."

She stared straight at me with her black eyes and I retreated toward the door.

"I'll see you again." But she didn't seem to care whether she did or not. I felt like I was again to be shot at sunrise. Then I threw open the door and ran out. There were the sentinels, tramping up and down, and once again I fell down on my knees and went through the lines.

RUTH PUNISHED IS SUSPENDED

Such disgraceful actions will not be permitted and the sooner he understands it the better.

"The umpires are in charge of the ball games and their authority is going to be respected by every man in the league."

Ruth's five days' suspension will cost him $1,500, his salary amounting to $300 a day, according to Mr. Johnson.

What it will cost baseball can be reckoned in the thousands, probably $25,000 for the five days, as Ruth is a tremendous drawing card. The fans love a clouter and the Babe is a clouter plus.

The suspension will also interfere with his home-run ambitions, he having garnered but seven so far this year.

JEERS HRT RUTH.

Babe's troubles with umpires this season is blamed to sensitiveness over his failure to get into his batting stride after returning to the game last month. When the fans who had the season before idolized him as no ball player was ever idolized, suddenly began to jeer and catcall him, the big hitter seemed to lose control of himself.

She arrived on the S. S. Orbita after an extended sojourn in Europe during which she visited Germany and Belgium.

But of all the pleasure she found in her travels, there was none to match her ride in the air, Mrs. Kinsley declared.

RAPS 'GRANDMA FLAPPER' AS MENACE

By GRACE DESCHAMPS.

Grandma Flappers—THEY'RE the menace of today!

The old ones—you know—got a bank roll and a weakness for henna locks and college boys—

The young ones? Pooh! They're "just the scum thrown up by the emotions of this old earth!"

How's that for a new idea?

It's the one offered by no less a personage than Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, one of the best known women physicians in the world and head of the activities of the Florence Crittenton League of Compassion in Baltimore. She expressed this opinion quite forcibly at the close of the Moral Welfare conference under the auspices of the Crittenton League, in session for the last two days at the Twentieth Century Club.

OLD ONES A PROBLEM.

"Certainly, it's the old ones who are a problem!" declared Dr. Barrett, while half a hundred rather—elderly—society women of Boston "listened in."

"You know the type," goes on Dr. Barrett. "Perhaps forty or fifty or even sixty—ten years are nothing in a woman's life when she gets to that age. She's got a nice padded bank roll and she can pick off the boys with greater ease than the nice young girl of twenty or so.

"One of these females attached herself to a very nice boy I know—an ensign in the navy—who was going with a girl whom I also know. And one day in a hotel in Washington, where I was lunching with this young girl, whom did we see walking into the dining room but this boy—in the tow of this rouged old vamp of at least fifty-five.

WHERE DANGER LIES.

"Her fingers were weighed down with diamonds and she sat there puffing a cigarette and rolling her eyes like a love-sick calf. And, take my word for it, they're far more dangerous than the young flappers!

"When the young flapper paints her face, bobs her locks and slices off her skirts up to her knees, it's merely the expression of her brimming-over-ness. She is just a beau and she's going to have him. The young fellows don't react now the way they did in my time. Why, any girl could get a man, then. Now, they're scarce and they're considerably more FOOLISH! The foolish young man of today shows a preference for the be-painted little silly thing and so, of course, the be-painted little thing continues to lather on more rouge and even her sensible sister is beginning to wonder if she hadn't better try it, too.

"But the young girl who does this is young and exuberant and full of young emotion and much can be forgiven her But the old flappers—the Grandma Flappers—they'd ought to be jailed!

Dr. Barrett concluded her talk with the belief that the surplus of young women due to the war would not loom up as a menacing problem in America.

"The creative instinct always was—always will be—the dominant instinct in women. But we can subliminate the sex instinct. The well-balanced woman can find just as much outlet in creative work that is becoming the gift of so many of our fine young American girls, as in her children. Marriage is the normal—not career—function of every woman. But the absence of it is not going to make the American girl abnormal."

Would Jail Ancient Flappers to Save Youths of Today

HARDING WON'T SIGN LATEST BONUS BILL

By International News Service.

Washington, June 21.—President Harding will veto the soldiers' bonus bill if it is passed by Congress in the form in which Chairman McCumber of the Senate Finance Committee reported it to the Senate, administration leaders, who have conferred lately with the President on the bonus situation, declared today.

The prediction was also made by them that despite Senator McCumber's expressed belief that the President will sign the bill the measure will not be passed by the Senate until it is whipped into such shape as the President is likely to approve.

The official White House statement that the President's position on the bonus is still the same as he described in his letter to Chairman Fordney, of the House Ways and Means Committee, on February 18, was accepted by the administration leaders as indicating unmistakably that the President would refuse to sign such a bill as Senator McCumber sponsored. Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, an avowed opponent, pointed out that the President in his letter to Fordney more than four months ago stated unqualifiedly that "It is not an agreeable thing to suggest that action be postponed again, but frankly, I do not find myself favorable to the piecemeal payment plan, which is manifestly designed to avoid embarrassment to the treasury . . . the long drawn-out payments will not afford an effective helpfulness to the service men."

FIRE RUINS HEARST HALL AT CALIFORNIA COLLEGE

Berkeley, Cal., June 21.—Hearst Hall and Hearst Hall annex were destroyed and the Pathology building of the University of California was damaged in a campus fire, with estimated loss of $100,000. The University infirmary was threatened by the flames and its patients were removed, but the building was untouched. Hearst Hall, a large frame structure, was the gift to the university women of Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, mother of William Randolph Hearst.

Worcester, June 21.—Ladies' waiting rooms, hotels and railroad stations are being watched for James F. Monahan, Worcester's "Lone Wolf" crook who has been reported to be in the city disguised as a girl.

Monahan made a sensational escape from two deputy sheriffs about eighteen months ago after he had been convinced of breaking into a Main street garage and stealing an automobile. He was sentenced to serve from eight to ten years in State prison and was on his way to Charlestown to serve his time when he made the break.

BOY FRACTURES SKULL PLAYING PIRATE ROLE

Louis Ginsberg, who is ten years old, went out with several other boys to play at being pirates on an abandoned mud scow in the Fort Point Channel.

Louis was a sea captain. By and by the pirates captured him. Like all good pirates, they sentenced him to walk the plank. Louis, willing to play his part as realistically as possible, walked the projecting bit of timber and dropped to the wharf, 12 feet below.

Somehow the lad felt wrong, striking on his head. When he lay still, without moving, the others were frightened and called help. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he was found to have a fractured skull.

His home is at No. 5 Chadwick street, Roxbury.

SENATOR CALLS ON WEEKS TO RESIGN

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Jan. 21.—Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, in a special dispatch to the Topeka Daily Capitol, declared that "Secretary Weeks' resignation might be very properly requested by the President," and "it has long been quite apparent that as a Cabinet officer Mr. Weeks is out of tune with the administration."

The dispatch deals particularly with Secretary Weeks' address made in Ohio last week to a graduating class, and attacks statements which the Senator said were made by the Secretary there regarding prohibition and the primary laws.

"It was a singular time and place and occasion for a high official of the government to attack popular government generally and the direct primary and the prohibition law in particular," said Senator Capper.

"In his most remarkable and ill-advised speech to these students, Secretary Weeks, it seems to me, 'out-Bolshevikis' the Bolsheviks in declaring popular government a failure.'

"If a member of the President's cabinet holds the views Secretary Weeks says he holds, whether as a private citizen or public official, he should resign immediately as an official of the government, for he has shown himself to be so wholly out of sympathy with what he has sworn as an official to maintain and uphold that he is in no frame of mind to uphold it."

Inefficient Voters Rapped by Weeks

Chester, Pa., June 21 (By International News Service)—Inefficient communities elect inefficient representatives to Congress, said Secretary of War Weeks today in an address at the Pennsylvania Military College here.

"When I see a diligent, trained, capable legislator in Washington," he said, "I am sure that the majority of the people of the community he represents are alive to the best interests of the nation and themselves and are insistent on having that type of man represent them. If, on the contrary, he is negligent, careless and inefficient, the people who sent him to Washington are responsible."

The government is good or bad as the units of which it is composed make it, Secretary Weeks said.

NEW HEAD OF SHRINERS LAUDS GOLDEN GATE

San Francisco, June 21.—Visiting nobles of the Mystic Shrine are unanimous in their expression of appreciation for the manner in which the key of this city has been turned over to them during their shindigs here.

"Sunny Jim" McCandless

"Sunny Jim" McCandless, newly elected Imperial Potentate of the Shrine, said: "Frisco has indeed been the Golden Gate to us since we came here. It's a great town. We've been royally entertained and made to feel at home."

The Shriners were guests at scores of functions given by the city and its civic and fraternal organizations.

JAILED FOR USING AUTO OF EMPLOYER ILLEGALLY

Salem, June 22.—Thomas J. McDonnell was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction for unlawfully appropriating an automobile belonging to his employer, James H. Todd, Summer resident in Manchester. McDonnell met with an accident the night he borrowed the machine, repairs costing $700.

WARD HAD LOVE NEST IN NEW YORK CITY

By International News Service.

White Plains, N. Y., June 21.—Detectives today declared the blackmail alleged by Walter S. Ward to have resulted in the slaying of Clarence Peters of Haverhill, Mass., may be traced to a "love nest" which Ward is said to have maintained in New York city last Summer.

The apartment which Ward rented on West 126th street was the scene of many gay parties, neighbors told Detective Scott. They said there was such a "procession of women to Ward's apartment there was a new face every day."

Ward subleased the "love nest" in July, shortly after his wife, Mrs. Beryl Curtis Ward, and two children left the city.

His most frequent caller, it is alleged, was a red-haired woman. He is said to have quarrelled with her before the Summer ended.

District Attorney Weeks, it is expected, will lay the story of the "love nest" before the Grand Jury.

B. A. A. HUGH JUMPER IS ENGAGED TO WED

Rail Shopmen Try to Prove Contrac Work Costs Most

Elmira, N. Y., June 21.—Lehigh Valley Railroad shop workers are to be given an opportunity to demonstrate whether they can do repair work cheaper and more efficiently than through the outside contract system plan, according to word from President E. E. Loomis of the road.

As soon as materials can be assembled, President Loomis writes, the Sayre shops will be started at work on heavy repairs to fifteen large locomotives from various divisions of the road. Comparative figures on the cost and quality of the work will be made and set against contract system work of a similar nature.

MOTHER AND 2 SONS MISSING THREE WEEKS

Unable to fathom the mysterious disappearance of his wife and their two small children, John Williams, of No. 56 Burrell street, Roxbury, has appealed to the police for aid.

While Williams was at work, on June 3 last, a blue limousine drew up in front of his home. Mrs. Mary Williams, the wife, who is twenty four years old, rushed out, according to neighbors, taking with her the two children, four-year-old John and three-year-old Charles.

The three entered the automobile and were driven rapidly away.

2 POLICEMEN ARE KILLED IN IRISH AMBUSH

Belfast, June 21.—Two policemen were killed today in an ambush attack at Keady, County Armagh. A farmer, who was caught in the cross fire, was shot to death. Under heavy guard, the remaining Sinn Fein prisoners in Belfast jails were removed today to the prison ship Argenta.

By DANIEL O'CONNELL, International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Dublin, June 21.—The Constitutionalists and their adherents will control about sixty votes in the next Dail Eireann, while the Republicans Anti-Constitutionalists will have about forty votes, it was indicated today.

With the returns from eighteen districts still missing, the morning tabulation showed the following result:

Constitutionalists—58 seats.
Anti-Constitutionalists—41 seats.
Laborites—14 seats.
Independents—13 seats.
Total membership of the Dail—126 seats.

While the count continues to increase the landslide in favor of the Constitutional and the Anglo-Irish treaty, Dublin was waiting to see what action would be taken by Eamon De Valera and Roderick O'Connor, leaders of the Anti-Constitutionalists or anti-treaty forces.

Public opinion is hopeful that the overwhelming display of sentiment in favor of the treaty and the Constitution will stay any military activities on the part of the Republicans.

Children in R. I. Mill Towns Have No Shoes

Pawtucket, June 21.—Hundreds of children in the Blackstone Valley, whose parents are engaged in the big industrial strike which is in its twenty-second week, are without shoes, according to an announcement made by the strikers' relief committee. More than 500 pairs of shoes have been purchased recently and distributed to needy children.

Dances and various kinds of entertainments are providing funds.

$100,000 DRUG SEIZURE ON TRAMP SHIP

By Universal Service.

New York, June 21.—One hundred thousand dollars' worth of cocaine was confiscated aboard the Braga, a tramp steamer from Marseilles, France, by customs agents acting under orders of the surveyor of the port.

Official channels had heard that a large shipment of the drug had been sent on the ship, and the agents went aboard the instant she docked. They forced everyone to stay on board until they had completed their search. Under a pile of rags in the galley they found 250 five-ounce bottles containing cocaine.

PURITY

"SALADA"

"To Taste is to Believe"

Macullar Parker Company was founded in 1849—the year "The Forty-Niners" trekked to the Golden Gate

"FORTY-NINER" REMOVAL SALES

WHY ???

First of all, we have not bought and will not buy merchandise "at a price" to sell "at a price."

Second, the "Forty-Niner" Sales are not "bait" but a Continuing Opportunity through five long months preparatory to Removal to Tremont St.

All Clothing, Haberdashery and Headwear offered is strictly Macullar Parker standard—merchandise we are proud to sell because it reflects our belief in the real economy of QUALITY plus our ability as expressed in DESIGN and STYLE.

Every day, every week, new, crisp, freshly tailored Garments are coming into stock from our own Shops and new supplies of seasonable Haberdashery are arriving in the regular course of business.

This new merchandise must be sold in our present store. Other new merchandise of like high quality is in preparation for our New Store to be opened in November on Tremont Street at Bromfield. Hence prices far below normal.

Therefore, whether it is Spring and Fall Clothing or Hot Weather Attire, any man, any young man, and any boy, may come in any day of any week and find a generous selection of just what he wants at the time he wants it—and at sale prices.

"The Forty-Niners" were five months on the trail. THEIR good fortune lay at the end.

"The Forty-Niner" Sales will last for five months. YOUR good fortune lies all along the way!

SON'S CHARGE OF POISONING SCOUTED

Aged Roslindale Woman Died of Natural Causes, Daughter Says

Allegations made by Mathias Monahan of Dahlgren street, Dorchester, that his aged mother died under suspicious circumstances at the home of his sister, Mrs. Thomas C. Kelly of Roslindale, were ridiculed by Mrs. Kelly today.

Mrs. Monahan died on May 26.

She had lived with Mrs. Kelly at No. 3 Newburg street, Roslindale, for three years.

"My poor mother died in my arms," said Mrs. Kelly.

"She had been sick for a long time. Death was due to apoplexy. My brother's charges are ridiculous."

Monahan asked District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien to investigate his mother's death. "I believe my mother was poisoned," he told the district attorney.

Monahan seeks information about $6,000 in cash he alleges his mother had when she entered his sister's home.

Mrs. Monahan was 76 years old when she died. Her body was shipped immediately to Broad Road Cemetery, New Brunswick, for burial.

Monahan charges there was undue haste about the burial and that other brothers were not notified of the death.

Mrs. Kelly said today the body was shipped the night after death because there was no train the following night.

She said she hadn't notified Mathias because she did not know where to find him, but had wired a brother in New Brunswick, who met their mother's body and superintended the burial.

Dr. John P. Shea of Roslindale, who attended Mrs. Monahan throughout her last illness, said Monahan's poison charges were absurd.

"I understand there has been trouble in the family," he said, "but know nothing about it. Mrs. Monahan died from apoplexy and was in an emaciated condition when she passed away."

TWO AIRMEN HOPE TO FLY TO NORTH POLE

Here are the two daring aviators who will pilot the planes in which Captain Roald Amundsen, noted Arctic explorer expects to fly to the North Pole.

They are Lieutenants E. G. Fullerton and G. Omdal, the latter a Norwegian flier.

They are aboard the sturdy schooner "Maud" with the Amundsen party headed North. They left Seattle recently. Aboard the "Maud" are two all-steel airplanes. Both will be used in the flight over the frozen northern country, the pilots alternating.

NOW AVERAGE SPAN OF LIFE IS FIFTY-THREE

Chicago, June 21.—"The average span of life is now fifty-three years, against forty-two years, a half century ago," said Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York health commissioner. The statement was made at the convention of the Bureau of Public Health and Sanitary Service of the American Institute of Homeopaths here. Dr. Copeland says that industrial hygiene was needed before the average span of life would reach 100. He said improper modes of living generations ago caused the shorter span of life.

OLDEST AND NEWEST AT HARVARD

VETERAN GRAD SALUTES MASCOT

William W. Richards, '55, who bears the distinction of being Harvard's oldest living graduate, was pleased to shake hands with the youngest figure at the class day exercises, the same being Miss Elizabeth Burgess Watson, official class baby of the class of '16.

Classes as far down the line as 1860 took part in the fight which followed the presentation of the class banner to the freshmen, the ivy oration and singing by the Glee Club.

Scores of classes held their annual banquets in the evening and two bands and the glee club supplied music in Harvard yard.

CASH LACKING IN BIDS FOR MOVIE THEATRES

The Supreme Court went into the moving picture business today. Bids were opened in the clerk's office for the sale of a string of moving picture houses in New England cities known as the Empire Circuit. They were the property of the defunct Cosmopolitan Trust Company, now in the hands of Bank Commissioner Joseph C. Allen and were ordered sold by the Supreme Court.

Theatres comprised four in Newport, one in Lowell, two in Newburyport, two in Amesbury, one in Portland, Me., and five in Fall River. Four bids were received by the court but none met with specifications and it is expected new bids will be called for.

The City Central Corporation of Boston offered $500,000 for the entire circuit, but neglected to send check. Ralph Pratt of Lawrence offered $100,000 for a clear title to the Strand and Princess Theatres in Newburyport and the Strand Theatre in Amesbury. He enclosed a separate bid of $70,000 for the two Newburyport houses and $30,000 for the house in Amesbury. Frederick Cravens of Boston bid $500,000 for the entire circuit, offering half cash and balance in instalments. George W. Bryant bid $19,150 for the Strand Theatre of Amesbury.

SIGN ON AUTO BRINGS DRIVER TO COURT

John L. Berta of Alberta street, Waltham, was found guilty in the Woburn court today of pubishing a notice with a false statement. Judge Abbott placed the case on file. The complaint was brought by William N. Horne of the Newton Vulcanizing Company. Berta left his car to be nickel-plated. After the job had been done several times Berta drew his car through Waltham and Newton bearing a sign saying: "This nickel-plating was done by the Newton Vulcanizing Company and guaranteed not to rust—look at it."

CATHOLICS AND JEWS TO HELP RUN BROWN

Roman Catholics and Jews may be eligible for membership on the board of trustees of Brown University, is a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Brown Alumni is passed. Representation on the board has always been along strictly sectarian lines, and this liberalizing proposal has been given much significance in view of the recent agitation over the burning of Jews from Harvard University.

W. C. Greene, Providence business man, brought up the resolution at the annual meeting of the associated alumni of the university. It provides for a committee to be appointed by the president of the university to make an investigation with the view of liberalizing certain parts of the university, upon which restrictions are now placed.

The rule referring to membership on the board of trustees in effect at present provides for thirty-six members, "twenty-two of which shall forever be of the denomination called Baptist,five of which shall forever be of the denomination called Quakers; four of which shall forever be of the denomination called Congregationalists, and five of which shall forever be of the denomination called Episcopalians."

The new resolution recalls the one of ten years ago when a movement was successfully made to get Episcopalian representation on the board.

Richard B. Comstock, prominent lawyer of Providence, spoke briefly in favor of the proposed amendment to admit Roman Catholics and Jews and heartily endorsed the action of Mr. Greene.

Give your truck a chance to pay its way. Sparkplug troubles cause delays and cost money. Gas comes high. As a matter of business, cut out the delays, save gas and make your sparkplugs troubleproof by using the B-G—"The Plug That Cleans Itself."

The Plug that Cleans Itself

The B-G is carbon-proof and foul-proof. Every B-G spark produces a spurt of flame which scours the porcelain and points clean. See details in panel at right.

How the BG Obtains Its Results

The "hot spot" disk heats to an instant, and, with the electrodes and porcelain, to at a temperature that highly vaporizes the gas and oil at the sparking points and inside the plug chamber. When the spark occurs, the vapor in the interior of plug, which forms a primary combustion chamber, bursts cleanly, and the intantaneously increased pressure rushes in a spurt of flame into the cylinder

This action prevents carbonization of the porcelain, insures the sparking points, and compels quick and complete ignition, with maximum power and fuel economy.

The B-G self-cleaning plug for motor cycles is sold in dealers' stocks and can be sent by the normal parcel service. Place demand confidently. We guarantee it by the same plug efficiency in your truck motor!

B-G

The Plug that Cleans Itself

(BASIC PATENTS GRANTED—MARCH 14—1922)

The B-G spark-flame also shoots the ignition right to the heart of the explosive charge in the cylinder, for a quick, clean, 100% powerful explosion.

With that kind of super-ignition you will use a very lean mixture—a leaner and more economical mixture than you have ever been able to use before—and you will still get increased power!

Your dealer is ready to supply you with the B-G. See him today.

FLEET OWNERS—THE B-G DEALER IN YOUR CITY WILL BE GLAD TO CALL ON YOUR SUPERINTENDENT. DROP HIM A CARD AND GET ALL THE DETAILS.

It is your chance to own a really high-grade motor car on terms that will be a positive revelation.

Cars Renewed With the Intention to Sell for More Than Prices Shown

It has taken us many weeks to prepare for this gigantic sale. We have spared no expense in labor or material. We have automatically cut the prices of these cars at least two to four hundred dollars each; we are determined to take our losses and be done with it.

Buy the Wife and Family a Car—Buy It Now—and Buy It Here

When the people next door and the family across the street start out for a little motor trip, your wife and kiddies look on with many a wish that they were situated so that they could go, too. The only reason for not going is just a car. At this sale you can get just the car you want for very little money and plenty of time to pay for it. Come in and let us prove to you that you can afford to own a car under our easy payment plan.

A Car for Every Purpose—A Car for Every Purse

Never in the history of this city has anything like this sale been attempted—it is the most stupendous event we have ever entered into. As distributors of Chandler and Cleveland motor cars we naturally have a number of the very finest used automobiles. It is better to buy a high grade used car than a cheap new one. In addition to the many expensive used cars, we have a large stock of lower priced cars and all will be sold at prices that will astound and astonish automobile buyers for hundreds of miles around.

Come Early!

When you leave home bring along your check book, or at least $100 or $200 in cash, to enable you to make a deposit on the car you select—positively no automobile will be reserved without a deposit. The mechanic or laboring man is just as welcome here as the business or professional man. Your dealings will be confidential and dignified. You may select any car, at terms to suit your convenience.

Free Driving Lessons

If you cannot drive we will supply you with the services of a competent instructor free of all expense; we will teach you the care of a car, and the proper way to handle it under all conditions.

Cash or Time

You name the terms in reason. Any cash offer—any time offer—any proposition within the bounds of reason—will buy any car shown in this sale.

SATISFACTION

Drive the car you select five days. If at the end of that time you are not entirely satisfied with it, bring the car back and we will gladly allow you every dollar you have paid on it to apply on the purchase of any car in stock.

Pay-As-You-Ride

"I Cannot Afford to Pay All Cash"

This is another reason advanced. You need not pay all cash; our resources are such that we can give you liberal credit, and, how is what, we can accommodate practically all. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old car as part payment on the purchase of any of these renewed cars.

BOSTON FOLK ON DISABLED CUNARDER

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gaston and Miss Hope Gaston are among the prominent Bostonians on the saloon passenger list of the crippled Cunard liner Samaria, which has been forced to put back to Liverpool by engine trouble after starting for this port. She was due to reach Boston Friday morning.

The disabled ship was expected to arrive in Liverpool docks some time today, and the report of her condition gives no intimation that she is in any danger or that her passengers have been subjected to any hardship.

Hope Gaston.

Among the other Boston folk on the vessel are Miss Margaret Anthony and Miss A. R. Anthony, accompanied by Mrs. Morgan Hatch, all of the Hotel Ludlow, Boston; Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Cushing of Brookline, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Bush of Brookline, Frank H. and Mrs. Stevens of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Goodwin of Dorchester, Miss Katherine Stanton of No. 83 Marlboro street, Mrs. M. S. Thompson and Miss S. S. Clement of Newbury, and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wells of Worcester.

The Cunard line officials here have announced that all these passengers will be transferred to the company's liner Laconia, due to sail from Queenstown Friday.

The disabled liner Samaria was scheduled to leave this port on her return voyage on June 28, and arrangements have been made to send the passengers booked for that trip to New York or Montreal.

HUTCHINSON STATUE STILL WITHOUT HOME

After months of negotiation and another futile conference today the statue of Anne Hutchinson is still without a home or final resting place.

The statue, in bronze, was presented to the State by the memorial association organized to perpetuate her name. The Legislature recently passed a law to accept the statue, but the Art Commission and the Governors Council today failed to agree on a site in which to place it. More conference will be held.

Flapper Finds Weather Man and Gets Scientific Low Down on Moisture

By THE FLAPPER

Put back the borrowed umbrellas, folks—the old sun is about to shine out. Mr. J. W. Smith said so yesterday on his honor as a weather man, which you can take or leave.

I galloped over to the weather bureau in my goo-loshes to take the rain machine's pulse and see if there was any rain about getting my place in the ark.

"Why so much weather lately?" I asked him.

"Rainoral deserit two effigy bafers," he answered, intelligently.

HE RECOVERS.

"Do you get that way often?" I asked him.

"Oh—I didn't know there was anyone here," the youth said, looking up through his wind-shields. "I was just reading off the weather report for Boston."

"But it didn't mean anything," I objected.

"It's in code," explained the youth. "We always take down the weather report in code."

"I don't understand geology," I told him. "What does it mean in plain flapper talk?"

"Fair and warmer," answered the youth. "Pardon me—the 'phone."

The young man talked a moment on the phone and then hollered:

Mr. J. W. Smith, the weather man, crawled out from behind a roll-top desk.

HASTA KEEP UNDER COVER.

"I hafta keep myself pretty well out of the way," he explained to me as he picked up the phone. "Everybody's awful sore about the rain—hells—no it isn't apt to rain next Sunday—

"Man wanted to know how much meat to order for his Summer resort for over Sunday," the weather man said as he hung up the phone. "They call us up like that all day. You see, if it rains, people stay home and eat and the hotel men out at the beaches lose out. But then, as I've often told them, they ought to take out rain insurance and not bother me."

"I don't know em for gettin' up on their ears over this week's cloudbursts," I said. "I've had buckets of water rollin' off the brim of my flapper hat for days."

"Four and sixty-four one-hundredths inches to be exact," answered the weather man. "That's how much three days' rainfall."

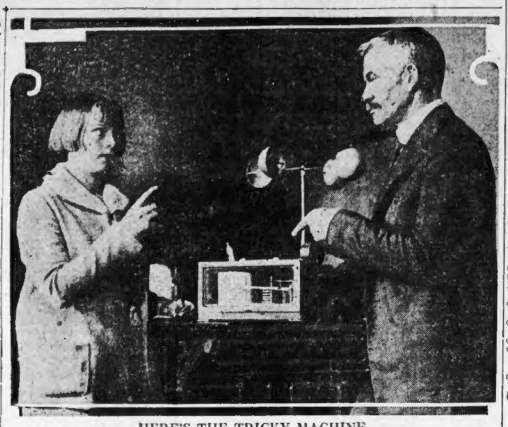
I looked at the [illegible] line being traced under the glass — the matter-of-fact registering of the silver lining of the rain-cloude, faintly shining through.

"When the sun isn't shining the line traced is perfectly straight," explained the weather man. "Next to it is the automatic rain gage. It records every one-hundredth of an inch of rainfall."

Mr. Smith explained all the other weather machinery and then said he'd have to be going.

"I've got a date in court," he explained. "A man in an automobile ran right into a drug store and up to the soda fountain and asked for a marshmallow sundae.

"Now he's saying that he couldn't help it—the car skidded. I've got to testify that it didn't rain within a week of that day."



HERE'S THE TRICKY MACHINE

If you're going to have a pic nic better sneak up to the weather bureau and throw a brick at this machine. It's the little fella that causes all the trouble—the rain gage. Its tricks are being defended here by Mr. T. L. Bridges, assistant weather man.

DEAD RAT CAUSE OF CRASH OF 2 MOTOR CARS

Phil Cohen turned off the gas, pulled on the emergency brake, but the big car he was driving shot ahead.

Into a car at the curb in Pleasant street, Malden, it crashed and then overturned.

A patrolman rushed up.

"Don't you know how to drive?" he shouted.

"Oh," said Cohen, "what a headache. Mr. Policeman, as sure as I stand here I shut off the gas and pulled the brake and what happened? Oh, it's unbelievable. That car shot ahead full speed and bang."

Cohen screwed up a wry face.

"Alibis," said the policeman. "Alibis."

He surveyed the overturned car and the smashed one at the curb, the property of Dr. Richard C. Dutton of Avon street, Wakefield.

Then with others he righted the Cohen car.

The hood was opened and out dropped a huge dead rat.

It had got mixed up with the accelerator rod and opened the throttle when Cohen tried to stop.

"See," said Cohen.

"I wouldn't have believed it," said the policeman.

Catholic Clergy Score British on "Irish Turkey"

Dublin, June 21 (By Associated Press.)—The Irish Catholic hierarchy at Maynooth has condemned the action of the Ulster constabulary in holding up Cardinal Logue on three occasions. The bishops declare they deem it ther duty to lay before the Holy Father and the civilized world a faint outline of the "barbarities heaped upon the beloved head of the Irish church."

The hierarchy declares that the deadly effect of partition has been to ruin Ireland, and that the British government is now backing its "Turkey in Ireland."

MATRIMONIAL 'EXPERT' ASKS 2D DIVORCE

Mrs. Ray Rosengarten, who unburdened herself of a complete recipe for marital happiness when she secured a divorce from her first husband 10 years ago, appeared in Suffolk County Superior Court to testify against her second husband, Isadore Rosengarten, to whom she was married some time after she had given the papers her views on the subject of matrimony.

She is now seeking a divorce for cruel and abusive treatment.

At the time of her first divorce Mrs. Rosengarten had said a girl must pick out her own husband; must make sure he has a good disposition; must not marry in her 'teens, and must get a divorce if she finds herself mismated.

Her testimony showed that she followed the first three instructions when she married Rosengarten, and that she is now trying to follow the fourth.

WISE WOMEN
A famous medical man of ancient times states regarding his writings that they were but a collection of knowledge obtained from the "Wise Women."
Do you realize that in those times the women, and not the men, knew about the healing properties of medicinal herbs, roots and barks? From this source the women had a knowledge of the treatment of disease and of the healing merit of roots and herbs.
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was originated by a woman, Lydia E. Pinkham, and is now known and praised by women of all ages. It is prepared from roots and herbs having medicinal action of great value in the treatment of troubles women so often have.

Question Box for Radio Fans

A. L. G., Newburyport—Vacuum tubes are made in two or three varieties for detecting, amplifying and transmitting. These tubes are sometimes called audion tubes. A tube for amplifying is constructed for use with a higher voltage in the plate circuit. Directions for the construction of a loose coupler may be had in any one of a number of books. The hook-up you enclose is correct except that the phone condenser should be bonnected across the phones and not in series with one side as you seem to have it. If you use the same binding posts on the condenser for the ends of the phone wires and the plate and filament leads, you will have it set up correctly.

R. H., Salem—The use of appliances for using the electric light wires as an antenna rests on the fact that a condenser will pass the high-frequency or radio energy, but will block the passage of the 60-cycle house current. If you wish to experiment, see that you have a small fuse (a half or one ampere) between the electric light circuit and your set. Use an air condenser well constructed, the size of which you will have to find by experiment. Use only one of the pair of lighting wires. One of these wires is generally grounded, so that it will not serve your purpose. The other wire is the one you wish, and remember that if it comes in contact with the other wire, or with a ground, unless protected by a condenser, it will blow out a fuse.

W. A. H., Medford—No license is necessary for the manufacture of radio receiving sets. The matter of patents must be settled by someone in touch with the patent office; but, off hand, it is unlikely that the commoner forms of tuning coils, such as the slide and loose-coupler, are patented.

Denies She Had More Than Friendship for Russell

(Photo by Camplain Studio.)

3 WOMEN NOW DISCLAIM LOVE FOR RUSSELL

Nobody loves Roy Russell.

Alice Bergoshian of Chelsea, talented art student, whose arrest on a theft charge precipitated Mr. Russell's arrest for non-support of his wife and two children, says she does not have a spark of affection for him.

Mrs. Lulu Stringham, whose apartment the art student is charged with entering, says Mr. Russell means absolutely nothing to her.

Mrs. Emil Russell, the automobile man's wife and mother of his two children, then cape the climax by saying that she is through with him and will press her non-support charge.

But—Mrs. Stringham says Miss Bergoshian, who, it is said, also goes by the name of Alice White and Alice King, is madly infatuated with Russell and that the couple used her house as a trysting place away from the eyes of Mrs. Russell.

Mr. Russell is absolutely non-communicative on the matter. Mrs. Russell is determined that her husband will not be given an opportunity to marry the Bergoshian girl. She has changed her mind about suing for divorce.

"Why should I secure a divorce so that he can marry this girl?" she said. "I am going to press the charges that I have made against him and will compel him to support me and the two children."

Miss Bergoshian says that when she heard Mr. Russell was married it made no difference to her, for she always regarded him in the light of a friend and nothing else.

"I first met him in a business way. He invited me to visit the home of Mrs. Stringham," she said. "I do not love Mr. Russell and never did."

Mrs. Stringham is tremendously indignant over the statements of Miss Bergoshian.

"I invited her to my house and she was a friend of the family," she said. "She came every afternoon and stayed late in the evenings. Mr. Russell was here nearly every night, and frequently the two had their evening meal with my husband and myself.

"Then when I learned that Mr. Russell was supposed to be living with his wife and family, but instead, was neglecting them for this girl, I told her that she could not have him coming here any more."

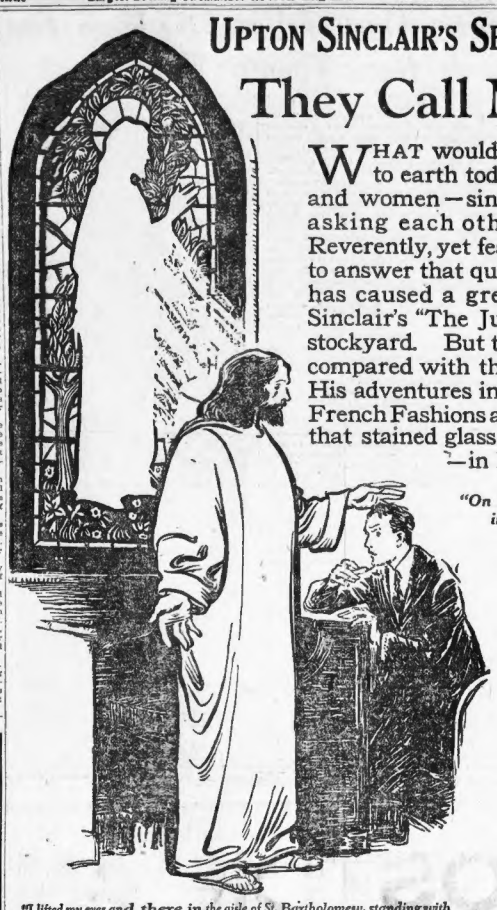
UPTON SINCLAIR'S SENSATIONAL NEW NOVEL

They Call Me Carpenter!

WHAT would Christ do if He should return to earth today? This is the question men and women—sincere or sneering—have been asking each other for two thousand years. Reverently, yet fearlessly, Upton Sinclair sets out to answer that question. No novel of our time has caused a greater sensation than Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle"—a novel of the Chicago stockyard. But that will pale into insignificance compared with the story of "Mr. Carpenter" and His adventures in our world of Jazz, Flappers, French Fashions and High Finance. Read about that stained glass window of St. Bartholomew's —in Hearst's International for July.



"I lifted my eyes and there in the aisle of St. Bartholomew, standing with his hand on my head, was the figure out of the stained-glass window. Where the figure had been was a great hole with the sun shining through!"

"On Trail of the Sleuths"—the Second article in Norman Hapgood's great series on

Henry Ford and the Jews

Did you read "The Inside Story of Henry Ford's Jew-Mania" in the June number? Now comes the second installment—even more startling. Read about the wild Jumble of Tsarists, Ford Jew-investigators, Roman Catholics, Masons, Pogroms, Protocols, Sinn Fein, Ku Klux Klan—and see if YOU can guess which documents are forgeries—and see if YOU can tell where the truth begins or ends. Besides this article you will find many others equally vital, particularly Edison on RADIO and Dr. Woods Hutchinson on PROHIBITION.

The Better Wife
—and NINE other stories!

"Can a BAD Woman Make a Good Wife?" Gouverneur Morris is answering this question for you in his new novel. Besides this and Upton Sinclair's—just starting—you will find a third great novel, by Sir Gilbert Parker. Also seven sparkling short stories—stories like "Lapidowitz Dines Out" or the "Sinfulness of Skippy" that will make you laugh, and stories like "Wandering Daughters" or "The Hidden Trail" that will make you cry—stories that keep you interested —stories that will make you think!

WALKER FOR LODGE'S SEAT; SCORES HIM

Joseph Walker today took out his nomination papers for United States Senator, and in an arraignment of Senator Lodge declared that in all the thirty years of his public service Lodge cannot point to a single piece of constructive legislation initiated by him for benefit of the rank and file of people he was chosen to serve.

Walker declared that Lodge is part and parcel of the vicious political machine which is controlled by paid lobbyists, which works for the special interests of the organized reactionaries and powerful corporations and which breaks down the young men in political life who dare to oppose them.

"It will be difficult for Lodge to point to a single progressive law which he originated in his thirty years that has been of benefit to the people as a whole," Walker declared. "I have searched his record and failed to find it.

"This is to be a campaign of progress against the reactionaries as represented by Lodge. I know something of their methods, for I have served as Speaker of the Massachusetts House and have seen them at work.

"If you do not conciliate the lobbyists and machine politicians they will strike hard to down you. Lodge has always conciliated them. They are recognized by the Republican State Committee. They are a part of it. Who have dominated the appointments that have been made to Federal positions? Whose interests have been consulted first? The old lobby crowd and the political machine.

"It is a well-known fact that Lodge for years has drawn a substantial part of his support from the old liquor element. They are supporting him now. I do not say that he will yield at this time to their desire to break down the national prohibition, but I do say that the pressure upon him will be great in return for their support of him."

WARNS GIRLS TO SHUN MARRYING AGED MEN

Los Angeles, June 21.—Mrs. Gudrun Goldberg Bishop, young divorcee of this city, warns all young girls to shun marriage with aged men. Mrs. Bishop says that unhappiness is the inevitable result of such alliances.

The marriage of Mrs. Bishop, who is only twenty-three years old, to seventy-five-year-old Seymour Bishop, prominent businessman, thrilled Los Angeles society a year ago, but the romance was short-lived, as the courts recently awarded Mrs. Bishop a divorce, less than a year after the marriage.

PAWTUCKET RISES TO DEFEND PROVIDENCE

Pawtucket, June 21.—The Chamber of Commerce and business men have joined with Providence representatives in the fight against the attempt of the Atlantic Intercoastal Conference to destroy the port of Providence. Vigorous letters of protest were mailed today by various city officials. Should Providence lose its position as a terminal port it would greatly cripple Pawtucket's diversified industries.

AUTHOR FINDS VANZETTI NOT SLAYER TYPE

VANZETTI
From the Free Voice of the Amalgamated Food Workers.

By UPTON SINCLAIR

"I have spent an hour in Charles town Jail with Bartolomeo Vanzetti. I have had some acquaintance with radical agitators of all varieties and races, and I think I can qualify as an expert in this particular line. I offer my testimony in the court of public opinion, that this humble Italian workingman is precisely what he pretends to be, an idealist and an apostle of a new social order.

"I should consider him just about as likely a person to be guilty of highway robbery and murder as I myself should be. He is simple and genuine, open-minded as a child, sensitive and possessing that innate refinement which makes good manners without need of teaching. He has devoted his life to the service of his fellow wage-workers and he is still serving them and knows it well.

JUSTICE, HIS CREED.

"Also I have had some experience in literary criticism, and of human personality as revealed thereby. I have talked with some thousands of people who have read my books, and I am able to judge if they have understood them. Vanzetti has read my novel "Jimmy Higgins" and it was very plain to me that he had entered into the soul of that working class martyr, that enforced all those privations, and conquered all those terrors.

"He is indeed Jimmy Higgins incarnate—the same as thousands of others who have vowed in their hearts that life has no meaning save from freedom, and that justice for all the oppressed of our social system is their god in life.

WOULD WRITE SONG.

"Now, I might say something about the peril to our law and government involved in the fact that those acting in its name have deliberately conspired to send such a man to the gallows. But after meeting Vanzetti one cannot think of legal systems, one can only think of the man.

"This brother of ours must be saved; warm-hearted, brave and true, the precious life that is in him must not be strangled by the hangman's noose!

"He asked me to get him an Italian book, dealing with—what do you think? The making of bombs and dynamite? The tactics of the class war? No—with the making of verses! He wants to write a song, to waken the workers of Italy!

"I say to the workers of America, bring this man out from behind the steel bars. Give him his book on Italian versification and let him write his song."

Betty Alden Tells of the Plans for Davis-Thomas Wedding

By BETTY ALDEN

THERE is a good bit of talking over the tea cups these days along the Shore over the coming marriage of Miss Marjorie Abbott Thomas to John Farwell A. Davis, for the ceremony, which will be solemnized at high noon on July 1 at Christ Church, Hamilton, will be by far one of the outstanding ceremonies of the North Shore season.

Needless to say, the bride-to-be is having no end of affairs given in her honor, especially by various of her fellow members in the Sewing Circle of 1918. Last week the Misses Anna and Lucia Wheatland—Lucia to be one of the bridesmaids—gave a luncheon and kitchen shower in honor of the attractive daughter of the Houston A. Thomases at their country home in Topsfield. Among the guests at the shower besides the bridesmaids were the Misses Katherine and Eleanor Dodge, Grace Parker, Sara Apthorp, Elizabeth and Mary Ropes of Salem, Rosalie Jones, Margaret Coolidge, Elisabeth Bright, Frances Munroe, Eleanor Reed, Dorothy Thorndike, Jane Shattuck, Katherine Knowles, Rose Townsend and Helen Rockewell.

It was only recently that Miss Thomas returned with her family to their place in Hamilton, known as "The Locusts," following one of their extensive visits abroad.

SPEAKING of the Shore, one of the most active matrons of the Summer colony there is Mrs. Robert Means (Alice Hubbard), who is no end interested in church work at Beverly Farms, where the Meanses have a cottage.

I understand Mr. Means has bought a place in Topsfield, a section which seems to be growing more popular and to which many people are turning, especially as the all-year-round colony at the Shore grows larger each season. As soon as the Meanses have sold their cottage at the Farms they intend to move definitely to their new place at Topsfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Means, by the way, are the proud parents of three very attractive children. This active young trio all have auburn hair, taking after their pater's side of the family, and they already show signs of some day rivalling their fair young aunts, Mrs. Arthur Richmond (Jessie Means), Mrs. Nicholas Reggie (Claire Means) and Mrs. Worthington Brooks.

THOSE of Boston's smart set who manage to run down to Newport for brief visits during the hot months will be interested to learn that music is again to be a daily feature of the famous Casino. This was decided upon at a meeting held on Monday by the board of governors, with Commodore Arthur Curtiss James of New York presiding.

Henri Conrad's orchestra, which has been playing at the Casino for years, will start daily concerts on July 10, and Sunday concerts will also be given. The Casino, as everyone knows, is quite the centre of the social whirl at Little Rhody's widely-paragraphed stamping ground for the unidle rich. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Fairfield street is, by the way, on the board of governors of the Casino, though of late Mrs. Thayer has been too busy to take much of an active part in the affairs of the famous resort.

Above I mentioned that Arthur Curtiss James presided over the recent meeting, which reminds me that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith and their two daughters, the Misses Rebecca and Frances Smith of Mt. Vernon street, are back home again after a trip around the world. The noted artist and his wife were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James on board their palatial yacht, the Aloha. The older daughter, Miss Rebecca Smith, went straight to Paris to continue her painting, and it was there that her parents and sister joined her some time last month.

AMONG the "younger married-rieds" now at the North Shore are Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wheatland (Dorothy Parker), who are visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wheatland, at the latter's country home in Topsfield, known as "Cedar Hill."

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wheatland, whose marriage last November was one of the season's important nuptial events, are planning to go to Maine in a few weeks, where Mr. Wheatland is engaged in the lumber business.

The entire Sills-Chevrolet Company organization in Boston will enjoy a full day's outing at the Villa Napoli, Nantasket Beach, tomorrow, leaving Rowe's Wharf by boat at 9:15 in the morning.

During the forenoon there will be swimming races, sports and games. After a real shore dinner at the Villa Napoli, with music and dancing, there will be a baseball game between the wholesale and retail teams.

Contests of all kinds, which will be suitably rewarded, will take up the time until the hour for coming home.

"This outing will be the first real get-together of the Sills-Chevrolet Company and we all want to do our utmost to make it a great success," says President W. C. Sills. "It will enable us to meet and know the different members of the organization and it is the desire of the committee that each member make himself and herself known to everyone in the organization.

MILK PRODUCERS TO RAISE PRICE JULY 1

Milk will cost an additional cent a quart after July 1, according to an announcement today made by the New England Milk Producers' Association.

The present price of milk a quart is 6 cents at wholesale and the retail price averages between 12 and 13½ cents a quart.

The drying up of pasture land during July and August, in addition to the extra demand for milk during these months, is said to be responsible for the increase.

DISORDERS IN MANCHESTER CHARGED TO POLICE

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Manchester, N. H., June 21.—All surface indications observed by the people of this city have convinced them that the textile strike leaders and the rank and file of the mill workers, who have left their employment rather than submit to the 20 per cent. cut in wages and longer hours of labor which the Amoskeag Company tried to impose upon them, are determined to resort only to lawful means and peaceful methods to bring about a settlement

Here is some inside history that has not been written which goes to prove it, given by James Starr, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America. It might be said, by the way, that he is an interesting character. Tall, slim, low-voiced, with the mildest of light blue eyes, peering through bone-rimmed glasses, slow of movement and of speech, he presents more the aspect of the curate than the director of an army of workers resisting what they consider an invasion of their rights and an attempt to wrest from them a measure of the fruits of their labor.

LAW AND ORDER POLICY.

He is far from being the typical labor leader of the cartoons. There is nothing blatant about him, but one quickly senses that his quiet manner is the mantle for a spirit of steadfast determination. He talked with me at considerable length and the substance of what he said follows:

"During all these many weeks of this Amoskeag strike there has not been an inflammatory speech by a strike leader. There have been a few instances of disorder, but they were not started by the striking organizations by them. Our policy is one of law and order. We started out with that policy, we have adhered to it and we mean to go through with it.

"We want to win, but we don't want to win through violence or injury to property. We are unalterably opposed to such methods. We want all the good people reached by the Boston American to know that.

"Whatever of violence there has been in Manchester during the industrial dispute has been due in largest degree to the police policy.

"When we picket at the mill gates, there was no rioting or trouble. Our pickets received their daily lesson upon the importance of obeying the law and preserving the peace.

"Well, there came a time when the Governor announced that one of the mills was going to be opened on a certain date and all who wished to return to work would receive the fullest of police protection. The Amoskeag officials advertised an announcement on the heels of the Governor's declaration that they would obey his wishes and open one mill. We may have been overskeptical, but honestly some of us thought we could see earmarks of a lee little plan evolved by a committee of arrangements consisting of Governor Brown and mill agents.

"The Governor, you may not know, had told us at the record and last conference we had with him in the State House that on behalf of labor and that he had learned that the mill officials had reason to believe workers on strike would go back in larger numbers if afforded police protection.

POLICE MAKE TROUBLE.

"So a mill was opened with the street of approach and the mill gates under heavy police guard And how many went back? Instead of 2,600, the number was nearer thirty. Up to that time there had not been a semblance of trouble at a mill.

"But the police, under orders from the chief, began to close streets and alleys and shove those who had gone to the mill vicinity, not to prevent anyone who wanted to return to work from doing so, but merely out of curiosity, and then there was a small-sized riot. I say that the police put it in motion.

"That evening there was some more commotion when the police began their smashing tactics right and left. There were a few arrests. Four of our strategy board went to the office of the chief to learn what the trouble was about and to advise with him on the question of bonds for the release of the prisoners, for the release of which, with all due respect to rank for a policeman and ordered him to place the man under arrest. He said the charge would be inciting a riot. Remember these men had not been near the mill at all.

"Learning of their plight, I had determined to call upon the chief to see what I could do. But his son, Captain Healy, beat me to it by calling upon me and ordering me to the chief's office at once.

"Right away he wanted to know where another member of our board was and said he was going to have him arrested for inciting to riot. The man was in Maine and had been there for several days. This I told the chief and then he informed me it was his intention to put me before the court in the morning on a charge of inciting to riot and warned me to be sure to appear with bondsmen.

"He seemed to have lost his head and I told him so. I reminded him he had made public statements that I had been helpful in preserving peace and urging obedience to the law at all times and assured him that he would find it impossible to prove that any of our leaders had been guilty in the slightest degree of fomenting violence. I was allowed to go and secure the bail for my colleagues.

CHARGES ARE DROPPED.

"Later our counsel saw the chief and told him he had gone too far About midnight my colleagues and I were summoned to the chief's office to discuss the situation. There was some pretty plain talking on both sides, during which we told Chief Healy that his methods were altogether to blame for the trouble and that, if we had been permitted to continue our picketing as we had been doing it, there would not have been any. The upshot was that he dropped his charges and, adopting our line of reasoning, asked us help maintain order at and about the mill gates in the morning.

"This we agreed to do and did to the very best of our ability. Do not think we were not criticised by some of our friends. But we did not cooperate with the police for the purpose of helping them out of trouble of their own brewing, we were glad and anxious to be on the scene for the express purpose of counseling and restraining our people and saving them from the police. Time has proved that it was the wisest thing to do.

WOMAN BRUTALLY TREATED.

"We stood between the police and the crowd. We were the solid wall between, when, angered by the sight of brutal treatment of an hysterical Polish woman being placed under arrest, the crowd showed unmistakable evidence of a mood to intercede. We were jeered for doing that, but we were determined to prevent violent action by our folks at all hazards to ourselves. That was the danger point. Failure to control the situation meant wild rioting, with all the terrible things that follow when a crowd goaded beyond endurance stampeds.

"That was the great crisis in thisstrike It was safely passed through the control exercised by the strike leaders throughout their fearless upholding of their policy of law and order. I shudder when I think of what might have been had the police been left to their own methods.

"We were praised and thanked by many but we were tricked by those who should have been most thankful. Even while we had been doing our best for law and order and while police the very worst that could be done, plans were being made to put us under the ban of an injunction.

"Even after it was served upon us, Chief Healy told us it would be all right with him if we went to the mill gates to continue our peaceful pursuits. But there has been no more picketing. We are obeying the law to the letter.

"What has been the result of the injunction? That freed us completely of the charge of intimidation so freely made by the satellites of the Amoskeag Mills. That protected all avenues to the mill and did away with our presence and still there has not been a break of the ranks of the workers in making this fine body stand for economic justice.

"Chief Healy then took another tact in trying to make us out as dangerous radicals. He declared there should be no more open-air mass meetings. Then he modified that decree, under protest and permitted one meeting on Sundays only with the proviso that non-residents of New Hampshire would be prevented from speaking. Rev. Herbert Jump, for the Manchester Ministerial Union appointed to circumvent the ruling by Chief Healy of the rights of free assembly and free speech guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

SLUR ON CONSTITUTION.

"When I caused Park Commissioner Carpenter, who is one of the Amoskeag trustees, to remark that the constitution 'was written a long time ago.' Therefore a dead letter in cases affecting the Amoskeag. Well, anyhow, the commission ruled that meetings may be held on Sundays And Wednesdays, providing they do not last after 8 o'clock and no outsiders say a word."

Mr. Starr says the latest edict of State Labor Commissioner Davis demanding affidavits telling why the parties to the strike have not agreed to arbitration has been read by the

"Here's to the Yankee, the last of the push,
"Where a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush;

SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS.

"Yes, we do, many of them. One of the most hopeful in the great work the Boston American has done to illumine the situation with truth. It has been the means of bringing out public sentiment in a way that is positively sympathetic.

"May I emphasize the point that, while we are willing to be reasonable, we are determined not to surrender. May I emphasize the point that, while we will win or lose on a policy of law and order and truthful appeal to public opinion, if it should so happen the workers are beaten, are starved out, the Amoskeag Company might have to fight radical forces which are not particular as to the means and weapons they employ. Such an outcome is to be deplored, as much for the sake of the community as for the workers. And the Amoskeag would find it a bitter penance.

"I have told this story and would like to see it printed to show our fairness and law-abiding spirit, to show what we have been up against with those whose sworn duty it is to enforce the law without favor; how we have refused to be driven from the path of rectitude even while those in high places and vested with great powers, who should set the example, have strayed. The workers want cordial relations with their employers but refuse to become industrial serfs."

LURA Liquid Henna Shampoo

An Ancient Oriental Beauty Secret Rediscovered

THE preservation and enhancement of beauty was a religious duty in ancient Egypt, Persia and India.

Century after century wise men and priests devoted their lives to the study of tonics and essences that would not only add to beauty but preserve it indefinitely.

The greatest discovery of these wise men was the marvelous beautifying effect of the henna leaf, and now—after centuries of time—modern beauty specialists have rediscovered the great secret of the use of henna—how it can best be employed to bring life, lustre and radiance to the hair by combining the henna with a liquid shampoo!

What Henna Does for Your Hair

When the henna tonic herb is combined with a pure, cleansing vegetable oil shampoo, as it is in Lura Liquid Henna Shampoo, you get double benefit of the henna. First of all it brightens and beautifies the hair, as nothing else can do, bringing out all the rich sheen and golden gloss. Then it acts as a scalp tonic, invigorating the hair to healthy growth, cleansing away every trace of scurf and dandruff.

As the henna is blended with the shampoo in just the proper quantity, if you follow the simple directions you are absolutely sure of getting a rich, glossy, becoming effect. In your home, at a trifle of the cost, you can give your hair the same henna tonic and beautifying treatment that the smart beauty establishments are using continually.

How to Use Lura Liquid Henna Shampoo

The directions are very simple, and, in addition to this outline, are printed in full on each package of shampoo. Men, women and children use Lura with equal effectiveness. It works up into a rich, cleansing lather that thoroughly and completely cuts the grease—cleansing the scalp as well as the hair. For a general cleansing and tonic shampoo, wet the hair thoroughly, then pour on the head one tablespoonful of Lura and massage vigorously. Rinse well, then apply a second tablespoonful of the shampoo. Work up the lather again, rubbing the scalp thoroughly; then rinse with hot water; rinse again with cool water, and finish with a dash of cold water to close the pores and arouse the blood to a healthy, vigorous action. Use plenty of water—this is important!

To Bring Out the Sunshiny Glint —Not Changing the Color

Wet the hair thoroughly. Pour one tablespoonful of Lura Henna Shampoo on hair, massage vigorously, loosening all dirt and dandruff. Rinse well Squeeze water from hair so it will not drip. Then apply another tablespoonful of shampoo and distribute evenly. Do not rub. Do not apply more water, but allow shampoo to remain on hair for 3 to 15 minutes; then apply water, massage and rinse thoroughly. Use plenty of water. By regular use of this method the hair will gradually take on the silky sheen and golden lustre that only henna can give.

If You Desire the True Henna Tone

Wet the hair thoroughly. Put one tablespoonful of Lura Henna Shampoo directly on the hair Rub vigorously into a lather. Rinse well, then rub hair with dry towel so water does not drip from hair; then apply another tablespoonful of shampoo directly on the hair and distribute evenly. DO NOT RUB! DO NOT APPLY MORE WATER, but allow shampoo to remain on hair 15 to 30 minutes, then apply more water, rub into a lather, and rinse very thoroughly. Remember! Lura is not a dye or stain. It will not, cannot discolor hands or scalp. It never gives an unnatural color—only the rich, golden-bronze tint so much in vogue

We were jeered for doing this, but we were determined to prevent violent action by our folks at all hazards to ourselves. That was the danger point. Failure to control the situation meant wild rioting, with all the terrible things that follow when a crowd aroused beyond endurance stampeds.

"That was the great crisis in this strike. It was safely passed through the control exercised by the strike leaders throughout their fearless upholding of their policy of law and order. I shudder when I think of what might have been had the police been left to their own methods.

"We were praised and thanked by many; but we were tricked by those who should have been most thankful. Even while we had been doing our best for law and order and the police the very worst that could be done, plans were being made to put us under the ban of an injunction.

"Even after it was served upon us, Chief Healy told us it would be all right with him if we went to the mill gates to continue our peaceful pursuits. But there has been no more picketing. We are obeying the law to the letter.

"What has been the result of the injunction? That freed us completely of the charges of intimidation so freely made by the satellites of the Amoskeag Mills. That protected all avenues to the mill and rid them of our presence and still there has not been a break of the ranks of the workers who are making this brave stand for economic justice.

"Chief Healy then took another tact in trying to make us out as dangerous radicals. He declared there should be no more open-air mass meetings. Then he modified that decree, under protest and permitted one meeting on Sundays only with the proviso that non-residents of New Hampshire would be prevented from speaking. Rev. Herbert Jump, for the Manchester Ministerial Union opposed most vigorously the vetoing by Chief Healy of the rights of free assembly and free speech guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.

SLUR ON CONSTITUTION.

"Which caused Park Commissioner Carpenter, who is one of the Amoskeag trustees, to remark that the constitution 'was written a long time ago.' Therefore a deal later on a milk car on the train due in Boston at 8 o'clock collapsed between Winchester and the West Medford stations, tieing up inbound traffic.

"The car went off the rails and the wrecking train from the North Station was sent for. Traffic was switched to the outbound track until the wreck was cleared up. The train was coming from Concord, N. H.

SEE HOPEFUL SIGNS.

any hopeful signs, Mr. Starr?'

"Yes, we do, many of them. One of the most hopeful is the great work the Boston American has done to illumine the situation with truth. It has been the means of bringing out public sentiment in a way that is positively sympathetic.

"May I emphasize the point that, while we are willing to be reasonable, we are determined not to surrender. May I reiterate the point that, while we will win or lose on a policy of law and order and truthful appeal to public opinion, if it should so happen the workers are beaten, are starved out, the Amoskeag Company might have to fight radical forces which are not particular as to the means and weapons they employ. Such an outcome is to be deplored, as much for the sake of the community as for the workers. And the Amoskeag would find it a bitter penance.

"I have told this story and would like to see it printed to show our fairness and law-abiding spirit; to show what we have been up against with those whose sworn duty it is to enforce the law without favor; how we have refused to be driven from the path of rectitude even while those in high places and vested with great powers, who should set the example, have strayed. The workers went cordial relations with their employers but refuse to become industrial serfs."

ACCIDENT TIES UP TRAINS ON B. & M.

Hundreds of commuters on the Southern Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad were delayed in reaching their work today. A truck on a milk car on the train due in Boston at 8 o'clock collapsed between Winchester and the West Medford stations, tieing up inbound traffic.

The car went off the rails and the wrecking train from the North Station was sent for. Traffic was switched to the outbound track until the wreck was cleared up. The train was coming from Concord, N. H.

RIALTO HEARS MARY AND DOUG DISAGREE

New York, June 21.—While fresh legal clouds began gathering in Nevada around the pretty head of Mary Pickford, whose divorce from her former husband, Owen Moore, started the Nevada authorities on an investigation that carried the case into the courts, the Rialto here there that "Our Mary" and her present husband, Douglas Fairbanks, have come to the parting of the ways.

Even before the news that the Attorney-General of Nevada had decided to file a petition for a rehearing of the Pickford-Moore divorce case, which was recently decided in her favor, local and Los Angeles moving picture circles were buzzing with the report that she was going to divorce "Doug."

Temperamental difficulties were given as the grounds for the separation of the couple every one believed ideally happy, and it was asserted in corroboration of the report, that the beautiful Fairbanks home in Hollywood, one of the show places of the moving picture capital, was

An Ancient Oriental Beauty Secret Rediscovered

THE preservation and enhancement of beauty was a religious duty in ancient Egypt, Persia and India.

Century after century wise men and priests devoted their lives to the study of tonics and essences that would not only add to beauty but preserve it indefinitely.

The greatest discovery of these wise men was the marvelous beautifying effect of the henna leaf, and now—after centuries of time—modern beauty specialists have rediscovered the great secret of the use of henna—how it can best be employed to bring life, lustre and radiance to the hair by combining the henna with a liquid shampoo!

What Henna Does for Your Hair

When the henna tonic herb is combined with a pure, cleansing vegetable oil shampoo, as it is in Lura Liquid Henna Shampoo, you get double benefit of the henna. First: of all it brightens and beautifies the hair, as nothing else can do, bringing out all the rich sheen and golden gloss. Then it acts as a scalp tonic, invigorating the hair to healthy growth, clearing away every trace of scurf and dandruff.

As the henna is blended with the shampoo in just the proper quantity, if you follow the simple directions you are absolutely sure of getting a rich, glossy, becoming effect. In your home, at a trifle of the cost, you can give your hair the same henna tonic and beautifying treatment that the smart beauty establishments are using continually.

How to Use Lura Liquid Henna Shampoo

The directions are very simple, and, in addition to this outline, are printed in full on each package of shampoo. Men, women and children use Lura with equal effectiveness. It works up into a rich, cleansing lather that thoroughly and completely cuts the grease—cleansing the scalp as well as the hair. For a general cleansing and tonic shampoo, wet the hair thoroughly, then pour on the head one tablespoonful of Lura and massage vigorously. Rinse well, then apply a second tablespoonful of the shampoo. Work up the lather again, rubbing the scalp thoroughly; then rinse with hot water; rinse again with cool water, and finish with a dash of cold water to close the pores and arouse the blood to a healthy, vigorous action. Use plenty of water—this is important!

To Bring Out the Sunshiny Glint —Not Changing the Color

Wet the hair thoroughly. Pour one tablespoonful of Lura Henna Shampoo on hair, massage vigorously, loosening all dirt and dandruff. Rinse well. Squeeze water from hair so it will not drip. Then apply another tablespoonful of shampoo and distribute evenly. Do not rub. Do not apply more water, but allow shampoo to remain on hair for 3 to 15 minutes; then apply water, massage and rinse thoroughly. Use plenty of water. By regular use of this method the hair will gradually take on the silky sheen and golden lustre that only henna can give.

If You Desire the True Henna Tone

Wet the hair thoroughly. Put one tablespoonful of Lura Henna Shampoo directly on the hair. Rub vigorously into a lather. Rinse well, then rub hair with dry towel so water does not drip from hair; then apply another tablespoonful of shampoo directly on the hair and distribute evenly. DO NOT RUB! DO NOT APPLY MORE WATER. But allow shampoo to remain on hair 15 to 30 minutes, then apply more water, rub into a lather, and rinse very thoroughly. Remember! Lura is not a dye or stain. It will not, cannot discolor hands or scalp. It never gives an unnatural color—only the rich, golden-bronze tint so much in vogue.

RIVER OFFICIAL HELD IN $9,500 EMBEZZLEMENT

Los Angeles, Cal., June 21.—Mrs. Josephine Pipp of this city has charged Creighton B. Bleakmore, prominent business man, with the embezzlement of $9,500 of funds of the agency. MANY GUESSING ANSWERS TO EDISON

WORTH A QUARTER.

From Francis Seek, No. 91 School street, Everett

No. 1—I would not draw any cards and raise him a quarter. Two can play at bluff, and being strangers, the best bluffer would win.

No. 2—Five hours.

No. 3—I'd go to his home that evening for an interview

From Howard F. Nelson, No. 27 State street, New London, Conn.:

No. 1—I'd see the quarter and raise him $5. If he stays, I'd draw one card with the chance of getting four eights or a full house

No. 2—Six hours.

No. 3—The situation having nothing to do with the case I'd try to sell my goods on their merits

From Joseph J. Cote No. 6 Vine street, Lowell

No. 1—I'd call him. It's worth a quarter to get a stranger's measure.

No. 2—Sixteen hours.

No. 3—I'd sell my goods on their merits, and not be a home-wrecker.

Burton C. Blanchard, No. 124 Main street, Windsor, Vt.: No. 1—I don't play cards. No. 2—Eleven hours. No. 3—I wouldn't take advantage of the situation

Alice Roth, No. 13 Longwood avenue, Roxbury: No. 1—Throw up the hand, chances are he has a full house. No. 2—Eight hours. No. 3—Mind my own business.

VIEWS OF A SPORT.

H. E. Fenton, No. 11 Whittemore place, Upham's Corner: No. 1—I'd pay the quarter to draw two cards and raise if I get a full or four eights. If I don't better my hand I'll call if his bet is reasonable. No. 2—Four hours. No. 3—I'd make sure he recognized me. I'd not mention the incident the next day, but approach him with a knowing look and great confidence

Oscar H. Brown, No. 49 Clarendon road, West Somerville: No. 1—I'd draw one card and play with him. He's probably bluffing to get my measure. No. 2—Twelve hours. No. 3—Be a sport and say nothing

E. J. Wilbur, No. 128 Welles street, Woonsocket, R. I.: No. 1—The three eights having cost me 15 cents I'd drop out and use the quarter I have for a new hand. No. 2—Three hours. No. 3—I'd try to sell him next day without conveying in any way that I'd seen him the previous evening.

WOULD STICK.

Joseph L. Holland, No. 74 Bangor street, Worcester: No. 1—I'd stick, because while I don't know what the stranger has, he doesn't know what I have, either and I do. No. 2—One hour. No 3—I'd give him credit and keep quiet

James J Carroll No 1147 Eddy street, Providence, R I. No. 1—Where did Edison learn to play poker? Assuming that the stranger opened for a quarter, I'd come in with my two bits as soon as I saw my hand. If I bettered to four or a full house, I'd boost any bet he might make as long as I had a dime. If I failed to better my three eights I'd let him take the pot. It's good poker to assume that a man standing pat has better than three eights. No. 2—Five hours. No. 3—Id get out of sight before he saw me. If I tried to take advantage of the situation the manufacturer might think I was a skunk—and I would be.

RETURNS SLOW IN BALLOT ON RAIL STRIKE

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 21—Union headquarters where the strike vote of railway employes was tabulated to date, a total of approximately 400,000 votes, or returns in the ratio of 60 per cent, of shopmen and the railroad workers on the system were about to protect unarmed guards ordered by the Railroad Labor Board.

Reports on the balloting at the Chicago shops of the Illinois Central were that the boilermakers there had voted overwhelmingly against a strike.

Rail workers and their leaders today were considering the reply of Wm W. Hooper, chairman of the Railroad Labor Board to the nine point charge sent in to the board that a strike would be authorized if the present law favors a suspension of work in the roads.

What effect Mr. Hooper's statement that the proposed strike would be a seditious conspiracy, unless unfortunate for the strikers and those out to the public, would have on the balloting the chairman of the board was a matter of conjecture today.

Mine and Rail Men Plan Further Parleys

Red Cross relief for the flood district already is under way Three air mail planes have been sent from Fort Sam Houston to the lower Rio Grande valley for flood relief work The first supplies are to work from Camp McAllen and drop bags of food to marooned farmers

ACCUSES DRYS OF LYING ABOUT WHISKEY

Chicago, June 21—What he termed misrepresentation on the part of the Anti-Saloon League of the attitude of the medical profession toward whiskey for use in illness was denounced by Dr. H. N. Stevenson of Baltimore a trustee of the American Institute of Homeopathy in an address before the institute

The Anti Saloon League's contention that only 30 per cent of doctors regard whiskey of sufficient value as medicine to secure a permit for prescribing it is downright falsehood," he declared. "Thousands of physicians in private practice who, were in fact, allowed no option to use it in their practice and thousands more who do so secretly where they are forbidden by law.

"Scarcely a doctor and you will find the percentage of doctors who do apply for permits to prescribe whiskey nearly eighty per cent, he asserted.

BUT YALE CREW MAY SURPRISE

"Lightly rose—Lightly row—
"O'er the dashing waves we go;
"Smoothly glide—Smoothly glide
"O'er the silent tide."
(Nursery chanty)

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

We don't know the author of the foregoing lines, and if we did we might not tell on him. Nor are we certain just how they apply to Friday's Harvard-Yale varsity crew race, and yet every time said Harvard Yale race is mentioned in his hearing a certain Cornell acquaintance persists in humming the lilting melody to which those lines were long since set.

It is possible this Cornell man believes the opening adverb adequately describes the rowing technique of the Crimson and the Blue, and the concluding noun, slightly rearranged—Lo!—defines the comparative progress made by Harvard and Yale crews in their race against recent rivals.

But what that Cornell man, or other Cornell, or other college men think of the ability and achievements of the Crimson and Blue crews is neither here nor there with Harvard and Yale men now that the annual Thames regatta is at hand.

Races Is Most Brilliant Spectacle

Not excepting the yearly gridiron battle between these most ancient of American collegiate rivals there is no more picturesque athletic event than the June meetings of the Harvard and Yale navies at New London.

To be sure the crowd of observers is not as large as those which cluster for football stands; nor does it assemble at a given spot at a given time, as is the case with the Stadium and Bowl gridiron gatherings.

But sitting in the broad Thames River and its grass-grown banks and, when Nature is in tune for the occasion, the regatta is a much more colorful spectacle.

All manner of power and sailing craft edge the way for the entire four miles of the racing course—their beaks and halyards strung with the banners of the rival universities and hundreds more of yacht and canal flags. Long lines of canvas-topped observation trains, crowded with pennant-waving Harvard or Yale enthusiasts, crawl up or down the East or West banks of the river as the crews paddle to the starting marks, to surge forward with the racing shells at the starting signal and continue abreast of them alongside to the end of each race. The knolls and bluffs and overhanging banks of the river furnish the setting and the sitting for innumbered observers and the railroad bridge stretching its black spidery lattice from bank to bank serves as the chining place of many others.

Everybody's Pretty Sister to Watch

And it seems that everybody's pretty sister has a Harvard or Yale acquaintance who insists that she be present to cheer or mourn the out come of the races, and everybody's pretty sister seems not loath to do so, for she appears everywhere in her daintiest bib and tucker, and her gay and agitated attitude while the race in progress adds a delightful thrill to the occasion, while her tuneful acclaim when victory crowns one or her almost tearful lamentation when her favorite is defeated, makes many an alluring or appealing picture.

Both varsity eights have evidenced a habit—almost a vice—for finishing last in their races to date; both have shown glaring faults in watermanship; both have indicated dissatisfaction with the coaching, or—as R. Fisher Howe would put it—with the both have been weakened through the withdrawals, injuries or ailments experienced, and have been shifted about work after week, and even at this late date the make-up of the two eights is not certain.

But Harvard rules the favorite, nevertheless.

Perhaps Harvard in finishing last in its "preliminary" races was no so utterly last as was the Yale crew in finishing last in its "preliminary" races.

But last year, just two weeks before the race, Guy Nichls, The's English rowing coach made some remarks about a certain absence of "guts" in the anatomies of the Eli oarsmen, and the Eli oarsmen just didn't like that sort of thing being said about them, so they went out and knocked the well known dope for a goal and and Harvard licked before the race was half completed

To date no one with a Limit accent has made a similar statement concerning the swingers of the blue oarsome and just how they will act without such inspiration remains to be seen.

Harvard and Yale began their preliminary series long before Hector ever became a pup—1864 to be exact. Occasionally in the course of that long stretch other little playmates were allowed in the game, usually to the sorrow of either Yale or Harvard, or both, for on four occasions Cornell hopped into first place; twice Amherst did so, and, on another occasion Columbia knocked a second crew into the running, leaving the big seven-oar final race in doubt between Harvard and Yale as the contesting crews. Harvard has won 27 times and Harvard 23.

Ten of those Harvard victories have come in the last fifteen races. Prior to that the Yale crews, as was the case with the Yale football teams, just naturally licked Harvard year after year with few interruptions. But about the time the Harvard gridiron teams began passing back, the Harvard crews got the same habit and for a period of six years, 1908 to 1913 Yale could not score a victory. Last, however, won in 1914 and 1915; Harvard came back in 1916 and 1918—no race being rowed in 1917; Yale took the 1919 event; Harvard the 1920, and Yale won last year.

The regatta program gets under way tomorrow afternoon, with the graduate and combination crew races. Friday the freshman, junior varsity and varsity races are listed. The varsity race is over a four-mile course; the combination crew, freshman crew and junior varsity quite events, and the grand-opera race they get tired.

THE HARVARD BOSS AND HIS WORKMEN

Captain Appleton and Coxswain Burnham and the Harvard crew as it will row against Yale: Bradford, bow; Webb, 2; Henry, 3; Captain Appleton, 4; Hubbard, 5; Storey, 6, Holden, 7; Brown, Stroke; Burnham, coxswain.

HARVARD CREWS HAVE AN EASY DAY

New London, Ct., June 21.—The Harvard crews had a comparatively easy day, Dr. Howe sending the four crews down stream late in the evening together as far as the Navy Yard in short, easy strokes. On the way back three racing starts were tried and Coach Howe pointed out individual faults and instructed the crews in proper spacing. The morning work was featured by a time trial between the freshman and second varsity, rowing upstream against a headwind, the freshman winning in 11 minutes 32 seconds.

F. Valentine Chappell, chairman of the regatta committee, has practically completed arrangements for the annual classic on the Thames, with the railroad authorities and War Department relative to the closing of the bridge during the time of the varsity race, the bridge to be closed thirty minutes before and after the race.

Also arrangements were made for the patrolling of the courses which will be carried on by the coast guard under the control of the secretary of commerce.

The regatta committee will employ twelve launches for patrol duty and each craft will have a revenue officer from the Coast Guard Service aboard who will have all marine regulations carried into effect so that boats of all descriptions are kept out of the lanes used by the rival crews.

Dr Wit C. Cuyler's yacht will be used by the regatta committee and Harry Payne Whitney's yacht as the judge's boat as last year.

The lanes in which the race will be rowed are marked, but the committee had a hard time getting the half mile flags in position, but in spite of the unfavorable weather they succeeded in anchoring them.

They have devised a scheme for displaying at the mast head of the referee's boat during the progress of the varsity race on Friday a great Crimson globe in case Harvard is ahead and a big Blue cone if Yale is leading.

FRENCH WANT YANKEE GOLFERS TO PLAY

Paris, June 21.—Secretary Becct of the French Golf Federation plans to leave for England tomorrow to urge Jock Hutchison, Jim Barnes and Walter Hagen to enter the French open golf championships at Versailles on June 27.

The federation has been greatly disappointed by the failure of leading American and English golfers to enter for the tournament and has decided to make a special effort to secure one of them as well give the championships an international fla-

Red and Blue Flags Show Positions of Crews

During the race the red and blue flags displayed from the referee's boat will indicate the relative positions of the two crews. At the conclusion of the race a large blue or red flag will be displayed from the referee's boat to indicate which crew has won the race. The blue flag will represent the Yale crew and the red flag the Harvard crew.

GIRL ATHLETES IN BIG MEET

Among the many women athletes entered in the Brighton Beach carnival is Rhea Davis, whose specialty is on the ball field. The meet has been put over several times, but the girl athletes are still hopeful that they will be able to get out and show some of the young men just how good the girlies are. Miss Davis excels in many branches of outdoor sport.

CALZA WONT RECEIVE ANY QUARTER FRIDAY

By JACK CONWAY.

How good is George Calza, Italian heavyweight wrestling champion?

This has been one of the most popular questions that has been tossed at this writer since the olive-skinned youth from Italy started his sensational run of victories

After Calza had won ten straight matches, the wise boys said he was only a flash in a pan. They reiterated their statements when he rolled his string up to fifteen.

As Calza passed the twenty mark, the intellectual gentlemen stopped and began to do some heavy thinking. Maybe they had not given this new marvel proper consideration.

Had not Calza defeated Hussane, Drrak and Gardint?

And Calza won

Stanislaus Zbyszko Now Blocks Italian's Path

Then came the announcement of Calza's match with Wladek Zbyszko. The Italian later reported he was ill. Wladek was so unkind as to say George was yellow. Calza recovered his health and went looking for Wladek. The latter had gone to Mexico

"Calza calls my brother Wladek yellow. Then he must settle with me," roared the elder Zbyszko.

The big body lifted itself from the sands and pushed its way to a telegraph office. The challenge was sent. Calza couldn't avoid the issue The match was made. It is to take place at the Boston Arena, Friday night under the direction of the Old Howard management

Can Calza Continue His Long Run of Victories

You can't call a Zbyszko yellow and get away with it. Neither can you make such a statement about a son of Italy and expect to be treated in gentlemanly fashion

So the battling will be furious at the Arena, Friday night

Too bad there will have to be a referee.

Calza has youth, courage, strength and a fine assortment of holds

Zbyszko will rely upon experience, strength, courage and a thousand different tricks

Jack Dempsey Should Fight Harry Wills First

The announcement that Jack Dempsey planned to fight Bill Brennan at Michigan City, Indiana, on Labor Day, didn't make a hit with fight fans. Dempsey can knock Brennan out any time. How start His performed this stunt twice already, and wouldn't experience a pain in trouble in making it three straight

This writer continues to receive letters in regard to the standing of the negro heavy-weight

Willard Refused to Meet Jack Says Rickard

New York, June 21.—When shown a dispatch from Los Angeles in which Jess Willard was quoted as saying he had accepted terms for a bout with Jack Dempsey Tex Rickard said this afternoon:

"I offered Willard a bout with Dempsey, but he flatly refused to fight under the terms of the match, and it had not heard that he had experienced a change of heart."

All-Scholastic Stars

By FRED C. LANE.

The superb playing of Jack Leary, shortstop of Newton High raises him to stand out like a sore thumb looking at the short field players. His work in this difficult position has been remarkably splendid, and as a result he is picked for shortstop position on the Boston American's All-Scholastic team.

Jack Leary

A defence player that is reliable is an asset to any team and in our humble opinion Leary has that qualification to be termed the "greatest of them all."

Tommy at an talmour with the looking of the Newton sportstop brand him as being the greatest short field artist who ever donned the Orange and Black uniform. His ability to think quick in the pinch cut off many runs for the Newton pitchers.

One game that stands out fresh in the memory of followers of scholastic sport was the defeat of Newton by Somerville in the last league game. Leary cut off three runs with remarkable stops and pegs to the platter.

Not another shortstop in the league is credited with the number of double plays that has taken place in Leary's career. He is a batter of no mean ability, with an average of .429. A slight batting slump at the close of the season cut this versatile athlete down from the .600 class.

Tomorrow—Right Field.

EDWARDS FIGHTS MARTIN TONIGHT

Danny Edwards has in a rather busy campaign tonight when he battles Terry Martin in a ten-round bout at a show to be staged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars at Lonsdale. It will be the second meeting between this pair, in their last battle, Martin won the decision.

On Friday Edwards is down to take on Abe Friedman, New England bantamweight champion, at Brockton.

WARD TO TRY TO PUSH OVER KAYO

"Gentleman George" Ward, who meets Nate Siegel at the Revere Beach Bike track Friday night in the first open air show of the season, will make another effort to get Mickey Walker into the ring if he defeats Siegel here.

Ward and Walker had trouble getting on a bout here last year, and their failure to agree was due to the fact that each of the boys wanted to be the favorite. Ward claimed that he was entitled to the honor because he had defeated Walker in a previous bout, while Walker claimed that he was entitled to the honor because he was the champion

BABE'S MANY CLASHES HURT POPULARITY

The question of Babe Ruth's deportment, which is fast becoming a serious issue and is costing Babe much of the popularity that he has hitherto enjoyed, is the big topic in baseball circles today. Suspended indefinitely by Ban Johnson for a needless argument with Umpire Bill Dineen in Monday's game, Babe aggravated his case by continuing the feud with Dineen yesterday.

Babe Ruth.

Babe's absence from the line-up may not cost the Yanks any games, as he was not hitting a lick, but it will cost the New York club a pretty penny.

There was no visible slackening in the attendance yesterday although it was generally known that Ruth would not play, but when the Yanks open here tomorrow against the Red Sox it will hurt

Ruth's friends had planned to turn out for tomorrow's game and give him a big reception, as that was to be his first appearance this season here.

It is more than likely now that Babe will be kept out of the entire Boston series and that will ruin it from an attendance standpoint.

The affair is not helping to restore normalcy among the flounder ing champions who feel that Ruth has permitted the losing streak and his own slump to get on his nerves.

Ruth Facing Stiffest Penalty of Career

Following Ruth's second altercation in Cleveland with Umpire Dineen, Ban Johnson, American League president threatens to set down the recalcitrant Babe with a heavy suspension and accompany it with a stinging fine

The idol of baseball is in wrong President Johnson suspended Ruth for three days for using abusive languages to Umpire Dineen on Monday in the Yankee-Indian game in Cleveland. The suspension went into effect yesterday. Ruth ignored it and appeared on the diamond in uniform for the batting practice of the Indians. Umpire Ineen ordered him from the field. Ruth turned argument upon the arbiter, who the day before had chased him from the game, and shouted:

"If you ever put me out of a game again I'll fix you so you will never umpire again, even if they put me out of baseball for life."

An argument ensued in which Dineen is alleged to have applied the word "yellow" to the King of Swat. Ruth, thoroughly aroused, is alleged to have invited Dineen into the club house under the grand stand, shaking his fist in the umpire's face. Dineen whipped off his mask. They squared off, but before a blow could be struck Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians, Steve O'Neil, catcher, and other players jumped between them and led Ruth off the field.

Ruth is the biggest drawing card in baseball. A three-days' suspension, such as he is now under, means probably a $26,000 loss in attendance at the gate. Will Ban Johnson set the star hitter down for a long period?

Between Colonel Houston and Colonel Ruppert, owners of the New York American League club, and Ban Johnson there is little love lost. They were sworn enemies not so long ago when certain club owners thought Johnson was getting too czaristic and wanted a change in the management of the affairs of the American League In fact Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis appointment as baseball commissioner with supreme power over all organized baseball's affairs was strongly backed by the New York club owners and others who wished to curb the powers of the iron handed Ban

Baseball will now watch Johnson's move in this new breach of diplomond department suffered by Ruth He may pass the buck, they say, and leave action to Commissioner Landis

In any event Ruth will probably suffer no as to keep a high standard of discipline on the diamond the star player must be punished when occasion warrants It even though it hits baseball in its finances as it does in the Ruth case.

If Babe Ruth is handed another suspension it will be his fourth this season a record for the famed homerun cloutter

When the season opened in April Ruth was under suspension for barnstorming last Fall, violating a rule in baseball that players participating in a World Series cannot participate in exhibition games.

Rain Ends Braves' Sojourn at Wigwam

J. Fluvius, who has become rather pally with this section of the country, oozed around again today, and so the Braves and Reds decided to leave this here section and allow the Red Sox and Yankees to mount the local baseball stage.

LYNN SCHOOLBOY TEAM DOWNS LAWRENCE

Bob Stickles, lanky captain and pitcher of the Lynn English ball team, pitched his third no-hit, no-run contest of the season in subduing Lawrence, 5 to 0, at Lynn, yesterday, eliminating the "Millers" from the New England title fight and crowning the Shoe City organization State champions

Bob Stickles

Only one Lawrence player reached second in a contest that thrilled the largest crowd ever to turn out for a scholastic contest It was the first real defeat that the charges of Mark Devlin have experienced Stickles was master of the situation throughout. The much-touted heavy stick artists of the Lawrence team went down before the easy-working Bob in sandlot style.

Johnny Newell hurled a great game for Lawrence, but lacked the superb support given Stickles. He kept the Lynn batters two stations from home for three innings, but witnessed a squeeze play, worked to perfection, in the fourth for the first run.

With one out, Kelley hit safely to left field. Harris came through with one of his three hits, putting Kelley on third, whence he tallied easily on Grady's bunt.

Dan Lahey, catcher and heavy-hitter of the Lawrence nine, was credited with two strikeouts and one twelve strolled to the box in his three trips to the plate. Ten invaders went down via the fan route

Lynn worked the squeeze again in the sixth, when Burke opened with a scorching liner to centre and was sacrificed along by Hadley. Kelley got an infield hit, Burke stopping up at third. Harris dropped a perfect bunt along the first base line and Burke scored.

A pass to Burke in the eighth, coupled with a sacrifice, an error and a fielder's choice, sent the flashy third baseman across for the third tally.

The team will play Augusta High Saturday by virtue of this win over Lawrence. Stickles is down to hurl the contest also.

MALONE TALKS ABOUT LITTLE BIRDIES

"I brought a bundle of sunshine in my travelling bag. And a flock of robins met me when I paraded across the Common. What's that story about the robbins?"

Jock Malone, breeze kid from the Middle West, whirled into the sporting department

I've struck gold boys—the kind that comes in big lumps. I think they call 'em nuggets."

"What's all the rumble about gold for," we ventured

* * *

"Park your spats and cane and Palm Beach suit over there, Jock. Now sit down and tell us about Chicago beer and those gold nuggets or whatever you call 'em."

"Yes, the beer's wonderful in Chicago. Had a couple of mugs of the real thing with Ed. Smith just before I left for Boston No wonder Ed's big and healthy. He plied me to the joint where they have the 3 per cent. stuff. It's better than Bryan Downey's wallop.

"And those gold nuggets. Ah!"

"Just been up to one of those X-ray galoses. They put the lights on the left mitts bang and pronounced it O. K. Now going to have the electrical burners put on it so that I can put on the K. O., when I bump into that Mickey Walker person at the Arena Monday night."

"What a all this bunk about a certified check you brought to Boston with you"

"There's the evidence, old pal, the evidence, I tell you. Read it slowly and weep for the boob who covers it. It's for a grand and it says Malone can defeat Walker. And it says it in a loud tone, too.

"Any of you sporting writers want to cover it? Sorry, always knew that writers didn't write checks for $1,000. Anyhow there it is. Maybe Jack Bulger, Walker's trainer, wants to make out a grand. Well, let him cover this amount. Don't crowd, gentlemen, don't crowd. A grand's a grand, but not gold nuggets.

"Oh, the gold nuggets, As I was going to say—

"Sweet Harry Kelley of H. Kelley & Hayes',

"But don't forget the gold nuggets. Will tell you all about 'em later. And also the little story on Downey."

CANTABS BEAT ST. ANDREW'S IN DUEL

North Cambridge Knights of Columbus won the big Twilight League battle of the week by defeating St. Andrews, 1 to 0, at Russell Field, North Cambridge. It was a wonderful pitching duel between King Bader of the Saints and Arthur Reynolds of Georgetown, who twirled for the Knights

The only score came in the seventh with one down, when Cronin sent a single by third Dan Leahy then hit to short right and was allowed two bases on a ground rule, a right field was a small lake. Fitzgerald then drove a long sacrifice fly to right and Cronin tallied.

In the eighth O'Keagan of the Forest Hills Club singled for the third time, went to second on a sacrifice, and reached third when Horan was safe on a low throw to first. Malone, batting for Murphy, was passed. Tom Dooley drove a liner at Tubber Cronin which nearly knocked him flat, but the Cantab youth speared and hustled over to first to double Malone, one of the greatest plays ever made at Russell field.

Or would you run away for a fresh start with new surroundings? If you had your living to make, would you try to get into the movies? Dr. Bretherick, the family physician, advised Remember to go to California. This she did, writing her parents a fictitious tale of having married and lost her "husband." She is thrown in with a movie company, and Tom Holby, leading man, gets her a chance. She makes a hit in a close-up picture and is out in a terrific desert sand storm. She falls from a cliff and is told that the accident caused the death of her unborn child. Remember arrives in Los Angeles and determines to "pay the price" for a chance in the movies. This struggle of a young girl to work out her own salvation is stirringly told in Rupert Hughes' greatest novel. Go on with the story.

"BUT suppose I were King Solomon and Brigham Young and the Sultan of Turkey all in one. A hundred and fifty a day—really, you know. You flatter me! I won't ask you how I could do any office work or how long my health would last, but how long do you think my job would last if I gave pantomime in return for favors? And if you won me over you'd still have to please the director and the managers and the author and the public. How long would our company keep going if we selected our actresses according to their immorality?

"It's none of my business what your character is off of the lot—except that your character will photograph, and a girl can't last long who plays Pollyanna on the screen and gets gaiety outside.

"Just suppose I gave you a job for the price you want to pay and collected my commission, and then the director refused to accept you, or fired you after the first day's test. What guarantee could I give you that you could hold the job once I recommended you for it? And what would the rest of the women on the lot and off it do if such a business system were installed here? What would the police do to us?

"There's a lot of bad girls in this business and there's a lot in every other business and in no business. But put this down in your little book, my dear—there's just one way to succeed on the screen and that is to deliver the goods to the public.

"The danger you'll run in this business is after you get your job. The men you associate with are mostly mighty nice fellows, magnetic, handsome, good sports, hard workers; otherwise the public wouldn't look at them. Well, you'll feel like a bad sport, maybe, sometimes if you try to be too cold and unapproachable when they're in a friendly mood. But that's a danger you'll meet anywhere.

"Forget this old rot about paying the Price. Good Lord! If you could sit here and see the poor little idiots that come in here and try to decoy me I get it all day long. Your work was pretty poor, my dear. I congratulate you on being such a bad, bad woman. But I'm human. You'd have failed if you had been the Queen of Sheba. Now go on outside and tell Mr. Hobbs your pedigree and we'll give you the first chance we get, and no initiation fee or commission will be charged. How's that! A little bit of all right, eh? You're a nice child, and pretty, and you'll get along."

Lifted Her Up

He lifted her from her chair and put his arm around her as a comrade, and slapped her shoulder blades in an accolade of good fellowship.

She broke under the strain and began to cry. She dropped back into her chair and sobbed. It was good to be punished and rebuked into common decency by the way of common sense.

Tirrey watched her and felt his overcramped heart surge with a compelling sympathy. He resolved to move her up to the head of the express army of pretty girls pleading for opportunity—the bread line of art.

When he had let her cry awhile, she began to laugh, hysterically at first, then with more wholesome self-derision.

Her eyes were so bright and her laughter so glad that they impressed a director who passed his face around the screen door. Men had been so deeply absorbed in her plan that she had not observed the other door standing wide open save for its screen.

Tirrey asked the director in as he opened the inner door for Mem's exit. But the director checked her with a gesture. Tirrey presented him as Mr. Rookes. He had to ask Mem's name. She gave it, from habit, as Mrs. Woodville.

Mr. Rookes said to Tirrey "I've got to let Perrin go. She's no good at all—no comedy, no charm. She's supposed to play a village cutie and she plays it like Sentimental Bill Gabler. Too young lady looks the type. She's very pretty, nice and clean looking."

It Was Thrilling

Mem was aghast at being so discussed, yet it was thrilling to be considered. She did not even note that the director had neglected to demand virtue as the Price. It was almost more embarrassing to have him demand her experience.

The camera caught the expression of Mem's face

"Oh, I played a bit for Mr. Folger. He said I was wonderful"

"Was it comedy?"

"Well, not exactly. It was character." She was trying to talk like a professional.

"Would you mind giving me a test?"

She was not quite sure what he meant, but she was there to pay any price, so she said.

"I'd love to."

"It's late," said Rookes, "but I'm desperate. Come right over to the set before the electricians get away."

He hurried her through the screen door, across the grass to one of the vast warehouses, and there under a bombardment of gaily lights, with a camera aimed at her point blank and under the eye of various men in overalls, he asked her to smile, to turn her head slowly from side to side, to wink to laugh aloud, to flirt with an imaginary man, to indicate jealous vexation at a rival.

He Was Fretful

Rookes was fretful over the snarl this small role was causing in his big picture. The delays and shifts it had compelled had already added several thousand dollars to the expense account, since the overhead and all totaled nearly $3,000 a day even with the recent cuts in salaries.

He assumed that Mem knew the rudiments of her trade and could use the kind of it, which were her muscles. He gave her no help, painted no scene, did nothing to stimulate her imagination.

In the desert, among the famine-wrung people in costume, under the fiendish sky, it had been easy to lift her eyes in prayer and to weep.

She found out all of a sudden how much harder it is to be natural in one's own clothes than to play a poetic role in costume; how much harder it is to be funny than to be tragic.

She could not smile at command. Her lips drew back in a grin ■ pain. Her cheeks were leaden.

The camera caught what her face expressed and it expressed what she felt, which was despair. She had her chance and she was not ready for it.

She knew that if she had been droll and mischievous, the director's face would have reflected it as Mr. Folger's eyes had grown wet when she wept in the desert. But Mr. Rookes was merely polite; the camera man was mirthless, the props and gripe stole away.

The test was short. Mr. Rookes said "Very nice. Ever so much obliged. Mr. Tirrey will let you know how it comes out. Thank you again. Good night."

And now she must find her way out. Tirrey was just driving away in his car as she sneaked through the gates, feeling that her Paradise was gone again.

She had no little hope that she did not mention the experience to Leva. She had no ambition to promulgate her failures. It was enough that she wanted.

For once, her gloomy forebodings were justified. And ever after she trusted her gloomy forebodings, often as they fooled her.

The next day passed with no summons from the studio. But the mail brought her a letter from Mrs. Jack

It was written in such script as one might expect from a hand that clutched a cake of soap or a hot boiler hand e or scrubbed clothes against a washboard all day six days a week It said

"Dear Mrs. Woodville: I was awful glad to get your letter Been meaning to answer it but trying to fix up my affairs so I and Terry could come up to your city Yesday I was to Mrs. Reddicks and she sa d she had a telegram for you but hav no address and so could not forward It. It said your mother was so worrit not having had no anser to her letters she was coming out on the first train and would reache Palm Springs day after tomorow Hoping to see you soon either there or here. MRS. P. DACK

Mem Petrified.

Mem was petrified. Nothing could stop her mother from coming The first blaze of joy at the thought of the reunion was quenched in the flood of impossible situations her presence would create.

Alone with her stylish ambitions, her contempt for a logs standards had been sublime. But that was in the absence of the village. It made a sense no difference in the look of her new ideals and practices that they must be submitted to a mother's eye.

Her mother did not know Los Angeles

But then, Mem did not know her mother. Daughters have not all been mothers, but all mothers have been daughters

Mem's courage turned craven before the wilderness of her problems, unemployment, poverty, ambition, Terry Dack to launch, and her mother to educate.

Remember Steddon was not exactly a runaway. She was a weu away. She was not included in the pitiful beadroll of the sixty-five thousand girls who vanished from American homes that year and caused a vast pother, though girls have been running away from home since girls and homes were.

They have followed the cave men, the barbarian invaders, the allied troops, the caravans, the argonauts. They filled the primeval factories and the places of merriment, the Corinths and Alexandrias. Some of them became slaves and some sultanas, priestesses, royal favorites, empresses, tearinas, queens of song and art. Some starved, some flourished.

Mem felt that to go back would condemn her to ignominy and futility, while to stay away promised a chance for wealth and glory. She heard voices calling her, saw spirits summoning her to the skies, no less than Joan of Arc did, and perhaps with no more in reality.

But now her mother had found her out and was pursuing her Her mother would be as grave a problem to her as she to her mother

The fall from the cliff that did not quite free Mem's soul from her body had quite freed the little parasite soul that was to have been her conspicuous fardel to bear through life. But the tiny leech had begun to drink her blood and in its death it tore open a wound that would never quite heal. Her soul had bled and she had been stricken with awe before the two miracles that fastened a life upon hers and then wrested it from her before it was quite a life

The letter she had written her mother then had been the instinctive cry of a child beset in the dark by some enormous presence passing overhead

Just as instinctive was the compulsion that drew her mother to her across the continent.

Cold Mrs. Steddon had raised a family and been habituted to a moth er's slumber, light and fitful and broken with frequent rushes to bedsides troubled by bad dreams or imagined burglars or mere thirst or a cough.

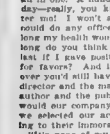
RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"DARLING!" He threw his arms about her. "Don't be afraid of me. You must know how good I would be to you if you would let me. I have tried to show you how much I cared for you. Kiss, me Addie!"



Oh! Idid not mean to hu t you there

No te teasing she struggled to free herself from him. When she still held her fast, she struck him in the face. And, as he uttered an exclamation of pain, she knew that she had struck the scarcely healed spot on the side of his face—the spot that had been cut on the night of the accident.

"Oh!" she gasped, as he shrank from the blow. "I did not mean to hit you there! I forgot."

"Forget what?" he demanded, seizing both her wrists.

"Forgot the injury to your face," she said

"But you really meant to strike me—to hurt me—to make me hit you back?" he questioned his voice thick with anger

"Yes!" All the courage within her rose to answer him. "Yes—I meant to make you let me go—you coward!"

"Coward," he echoed. "You dare call me that, do you—when you let that cut out there put his arms about you as he did just now? I suppose you think I did not see him lift you from the floor and hold you to him—don't you? Well, I did see him taking advantage of the fact that he was a physician—that Miss Johnson had gone out of the room for a moment—that my father and I were not there—that you were all alone with him by the bedside of an unconscious woman. Well, if he can do that kind of thing—I can!"

"Let me go!" she panted. "How dare you—"

"How dare I?" he scoffed. "See here—when I left Carter what you were when you were found You—the kind of a scrape she got you out of—what do you suppose he will think of you? Oh, I have not forgotten Paul's words about getting you out of a scrape! Listen!" his manner changing suddenly—"I do not want to hurt you, but you may as well lay your cards on the table here and now. You see I know all about your past. And Carter doesn't

I don't care if he does!" she exclaimed. "Let me go

But, instead of doing so, Addie not only held her fast but drew his arms about her once more

The floor of the room was polished and on it were small rugs, a few feet from the door one of these rugs slipped under the tread of the struggling couple. Richard lost his footing and reeled against the wall. He recovered himself in an instant But the mischief had added fuel to his anger and determination. With a swollened exclamation he beat his head and kissed the girl so violent y on the mouth that the blood spurted from the fresh cut on her lip. so thrill g the man's chin and the front of his dressing gown

And at that instant, as she still tried to fight him off the door was flung open from the outside and the light from the hall

"Oh save me" she gasped hysterically, clinging to him

He put one arm about her and, with his free hand, pressed the electric switch by the door. As the light flooded the room, he looked down at the girl within the circle of his arm, then at the man who stood, panting, his brows drawn together in anger, his hands clenched.

"Pardon me, but it is my business," Carter declared. "And you do not leave this room until I am ready for you to do so."

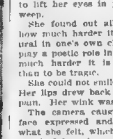
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By ANN LISLE

IRMA WARREN'S delighted reception of my evidence that Tom hadn't wanted to go away without seeing me was as much as Daisy Condon's fierce ejaculation on the night we met at Hidden Brook had revealed. And the evidence that Lorraine Haldane's niece has fallen into Tom's snare seemed about the last touch to his record of philandering.



I've seen the colorless grain of dust who once was Daisy Condon

I've seen the colorless little grain of dust, who once was Daisy Condon, turn into a radiant, vibrant young woman with the same mischievous boys very happy."

And her answer, following as naturally as the question made the lives of two, three people once more complete.

"I could be happy anywhere as your wife, David, but why insist on selves up in the city while we have this house to live in?"

A Case of Color

"Why did you bring the book to read? It's awfully dull." "Oh, it was the only one with a cover that went with my dress."

The Weaker Sex

The last time I saw Daisy—out at Tom's place, Hidden Brook, where Mrs. Hill was chaperoning her for the week-end—she gave me a definite impression of terrific unrest and lack of poise. At that time I sensed something alarming about in her mind and soul. And the forces I felt at work in her seemed directly due to me. I'd brought Kate's sister in to the new world where such great changes were coming to her. I was responsible for her—to Kate, as well as myself

The same sensation which betrayed Daisy's feelings so clearly revealed Tom's deep interest in Irma. Otherwise why should he keep "the newspaper picture of Miss Warren" at the launching of the boat she christened? But I hadn't taken Irma into account. Tom interested in Loren Haldane's niece was one thing. Irma interested in Tom presented a new phase of the situation. But what can I do about it?

Every solution of gratitude to Irma friend Tom demands that I keep my feelings to myself. Every impulse of loyalty from woman to woman insists that I warn the girls who are heading for unhappiness. And I don't know what to do

Besides that I am harassed by debts and the run that stores my business in the low house of my difficulty in swinging the Derringforth account. Suddenly a thought occurs to me. I will pawn my pearl ring, the last gift of Jim's that I have retained "Yes I do and get more than enough to settle the Derringforth bill at the Star newspaper

I am working late in the office sending out checks to my creditors, when the door opens and in comes Bradley. I will not attempt to describe what happened, but just as he was about to assure me, Karen's gaunt head appears. Bradley about his business. Then Tony and I have a talk, in which I tell him everything, and he promises to introduce me at his bank and make it plain sailing for me

I am so elated that I call on the president of the Gelda Company and get a year's advertising. Incidentally I learn that Hoadley is the heaviest stockholder in the company. I drop in on Mabel Davvy's father fallen into the habit of dropping in for a chat while he smoked his pipe.

DAILY SHORT STORY—LIKE MEETS LIKE

By Bertha R. McDonald

THE inevitable had happened. Harriet Freeman sat with Dick's letter in her hand and looked blankly into space, while two vagrant tears furrowed their way down her sweet face.

Dick actually was engaged to be married, just as she always hoped he would be when the proper time came

Harrie Freeman had married very young, a man many years her senior, and being left alone when Dick was just a baby, mother and son grew up together, "alway my best pal," as Dick so often put it. She was still a young woman and Dick, writing his boy's letter of confidence in her hand, the years seemed to stretch out ahead of her, dull and empty

Suddenly she put by her dust cloth and arrayed herself for one of her long walks. Harriet Freeman had walked off many a "little blue devil" among the brooks and trees of beautiful Scoville, and somehow this morning the afore said monsters were decidedly indigo hued.

As she walked down the walk between the rows of syringa bushes on either side, a little figure dashed through the gate toward her followed by a big collie dog.

"Oh—oh—please don't let him bite me," screamed the boy, clutching at her skirts. He's been chasing me all over"

"Why, that's Winslow's Shep!" she answered soothingly. "He wouldn't hurt anybody. He's just trying to play with you, dear."

Not Used to Dogs

"I guess it's just because I'm not used to dogs," apologized the boy. "Daddy wanted to buy me a puppy at the dog show last Winter, but they don't low dogs in our 'partment, so he didn't."

"Who are you, little man, and where do you live?" inquired the woman with an eagerness of which she was scarcely conscious.

"I'm David Brewster, Jr.—Davvy, Dad calls me. Daddy and me moved into that house next door yesterday. I'm having my birthday tomorrow, the seventh one I've ever had, and Daddy's going to buy me a nice cake in the village and put candles on it and everything. You see, I haven't any mother to bake me one, and we don't like Sarah's cakes so very much."

"Don't you think you'd like me to bake you a cake?" asked the woman the indigo visitor beginning to take on a faint tinge of pink. "I believe I can bake a better one than Daddy can find in the village. I had a little boy once—he's a nice big boy now, but I still bake birthday cakes for him, and I'd love to bake one for a little boy again."

The child's face brightened and he kissed her hands impulsively "Oh se—I'll run home and tell my Daddy! He likes cake, too"

When Davvy returned to the gate David senior was with him. "I've come to thank Davvy's nice lady for her kindness to a motherless boy," he said simply in a grateful tone. "We're a pair of them, Mrs. Freeman, and I can't tell you how much I appreciate the way you've befriended things for Davvy this morning Sarah, our housekeeper, is getting along in years and her baking isn't what it once was."

Vacation Began

The week after Davvy's birthday his father's Summer vacation began, and when a lonely man and a lonely woman met day after day with the love and laughter and prattle of a child to bring them together, restraint is quickly dissolved into thin air.

When Dick and Lottie were married in the Fall and took up their abode in the adjoining city, Harriet Freeman never would have lived through the dreary, shut-in November days without the companionship and gay laughter of little Davvy. Neither could she have lived through the long, desolate evenings had not

FINANCE —AND— BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

"I have just learned that three of the largest dry goods organizations on Fifth avenue are entirely out of debt for the first time in their history."

* * *

This was the encouraging remark made by Joseph W. Harriman, president of the Harriman National Bank, located in the heart of the Fifth avenue shopping district and which has enjoyed remarkable growth by its day-and-night intelligent attention to business—the bank from the start has kept its doors open during the evening as a special accommodation to customers. I had never happened to run into Mr. Harriman before, although I had often wanted to meet the man who writes the most novel bank advertisements in America.

"Seven years of plenty and seven years of famine seems to have held good for as far back as I can remember. For example, 1892, 1899, 1907, 1914, 1921 all were notably disastrous years. I figure that we are now entering a normal period, a period of plenty," said Mr. Harriman, referring to the stock market.

* * *

Like many men who do things, Mr. Harriman goes in for travelling. Not so long ago he visited India, China, Japan, and Russian Asia. He came back somewhat doubtful as to New York's ability to displace London as the financial centre of the world and America's ability to compete successfully in many foreign centres. Why?

* * *

"Wherever I went," emphasized Mr. Harriman, "whether to Mukden or Hong-Kong or Shanghai or other Oriental banking or business centres, I found British banks manned by young Scotsmen and young Englishmen, with some experienced man in charge. In the relatively few places where American banks have been opened, the young men sent out from this country invariably lack proper international experience.

* * *

"Do wherever you will, the British banking houses can draw circles around the fledgling American branch banks. The world supply of trained British bankers is regularly swelled each year, whereas very few young Americans care to venture abroad, especially to places where the climate isn't particularly attractive. Young American bankers prefer not to go so far away from Broadway or their own home city. In a sense, why should they? Ambitious young Britons, most of them, have to push out in the world to find new opportunities, whereas American openings have able to supply plenty of opportunities within her own borders.

BANKER URGES U. S. TRADE WITH CANADA

New York, June 21.—Closer reciprocal trade between the United States and Canada is advocated by Thomas B. McAdams, president of the American Bankers' Association.

"Why should it not be possible," says he, "to develop a trade relation with these sympathetic friends which, throughout the years, will prove profitable from a dollar-and-cents standpoint, and especially rich in the cultivation of friendship and the strengthening of the natural commercial and financial interest we have in the other's welfare?"

STUDEBAKER IS FEATURE WITH MEXICAN PETE

Stocks were strong nearly all day in New York, and trading broadened in the rails, notably featured by advances in Mexican Petroleum and Studebaker.

U. S. Steel dipped three times under par. In late trading it made a low of 99¼.

In the last few minutes, when money rose to 3 per cent., Marland Oil was off around 2 points and several issues were about 2 points under their day's highs. Steels and motors were weakest at the close, but not very active.

Studebaker made another new 1922 high. A year's high was set by H. H. Mallmon & Company, up ⅝ at 27⅜, and by Pan-American, up 2⅛ at 75¾. Pan-American also made a new high.

Mexican Petroleum continued a feature, rising 1¾, another 1922 high, and at this figure, made around noon, up nearly 10 points from its day's low.

Besides these, gains of two or more points were displayed at their best by American Sumatra, Baldwin Locomotive, Central Leather, Chandler, California Petroleum, American Locomotive, 1st, Industrial Alcohol and Woolworth.

Houston Oil was up over 6 points.

FUNDS AT RECORD LOW.

When money renewed at 2¾ per cent. it was at the lowest initial rate since October 11, 1917.

Mexican Petroleum, selling at 179 around noon, was not only at a new high for the year, but showed a gain of more than 10 points this week. Its record price was made in 1919, when it brought 264.

Belief prevails that the present move it a drive against the shorts, but there are also rumors that something more substantial is contributing to its meteoric behavior. In oil trade circles it is suggested that the company may be absorbed by Pan-American, which holds well above a controlling interest.

Studebaker at 121⅞, up 2⅜ is a new high, compared with 93¾, the 1921 high, and 12⅝, the high for 1920. The Curtiss-Studebaker is within 20 points of the 1919 high of 151, and compares with record high of 195, established in 1916.

STUDEBAKER DIVIDEND.

On July 31 directors meet for dividend action. They will have before them reports of operations in the first half which should show net profits approaching $17 a share on the 2,000,000 shares of common outstanding. This would mean the year's 37 dividend earned with about $17 to spare.

At the outset of the afternoon the flooding supply of stocks appeared scarce when large buying orders developed and the urgency of the short covering carried prices still higher.

"THE BLACK BAG."
Universal Production
Billy Kirkwood ..... Herbert Rawlinson
Dorothy Callendar ..... Virginia Valli
Mulready ..... Bert Smith
Mrs. Hallam .... Clara Beyers
Freddie ..... Charles King
Brentwick ... Herbert Fortier
Martin ..... Jack O'Brien
Story by Louis Joseph Vance.
Scenario by George Hively. Directed by Stuart Paton.

"THE BLACK BAG," at Loew's Orpheum this week, starts out like an O. Henry story. The young clerk decides to spend his vacation on Broadway where Romance rides, so to speak. Of course, we know then that he will meet the heroine under peculiar circumstances, be swept into a strange story, and given a chance to air his particular brand of athletic prowess.

Then we lose the O. Henry thread. The rest of the story could scarcely be more banal. One guesses almost from the start who the girl is the detective pursues and one knows that the hero will try to shield her. The main difficulty is that the leading idea is too slight for a five reel feature.

Herbert Rawlinson, the star of the occasion, has something to offer the screen. It is too bad that his stories are not better. He seems to be merely marking time until the right opportunity—or story—comes his way. Virginia Valli, the girl, is a splendid choice for the lead. She realizes her limitations as an actress and does not try to stress emotion. She is, moreover, quite one of the best looking girls on the screen today.

CHOOSE STRONG CAST.

UNIVERSAL is determined that their production of "The Long Chance" will be a production very much de luxe. Ralph Graves will have the leading role, while Marjorie Daw and Henry B. Walthall will be prominently among those present.

ART AND "MARY."

MARY PICKFORD went six weeks without having her famous curls shampooed and all because of art. She is hard at work on "Tess," the re-filming of one of her biggest successes, and decided Tess, a girl of the rustic fishing village, would not make a point of cleanliness. It is used as a contrast with her appearance after she is advised to "spruce up."

A number of people have asked who will take the role played before by Harold Lockwood. Lloyd Hughes, Mildred Harris' fiancé, Colwyn for the production, will have the lead with "Our Mary," while his wife, Gloria Hope, has a prominent role.

TWO MORE PLAYERS ADDED

ELLIOTT DEXTER and Gail Kane, leading players have been added to the cast of "The Christian," now being made in England with Richard Dix, Mae Busch and Phyllis Haver under the personal supervision of the author, Hall Caine, and the director, Maurice Tourneur.

These two players will not go abroad for the film but will join the company when it returns to the Goldwyn fold. Hughes has been cast for the role of Brother Paul. Dexter's part has not been announced.

"GIMME" NEXT

THE NEXT Rupert Hughes story will be "Gimme," which tells of a wife who, before her marriage was economically independent, but after the wedding service finds that she must ask for money for household expenses.

The story was written by Mr. Hughes in conjunction with his wife, Adelaide Manola Hughes, who recently published a book of poems. Helen Chadwick has been chosen for the role of the wife.

RENEW WAR ON GLARING AUTO HEADLIGHTS

State police officers, with the cooperation of men from the office of Frank A. Goodwin, Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles, have renewed the drive against the glaring and unlawful headlights that have come into use again this year in this section.

The opening campaign against these headlights took place on the main road to Worcester, Springfield and New York, when State officers and the automobile registration office men went to Wayland and stopped every car for several hours that came within range of unlawful lighting.

Several headlights were found to be out of focus, others were too glaring and in almost every case the officers found some minor violation of the headlight law.

The drive will be overtaken in all parts of the State this Summer. The offending motorists were given cards, which they were told to send to the office of Registrar Goodwin when their lights have been properly adjusted. Those not attending to the matter in a reasonable time will hear further from the registration department.

LILLIAN RUSSELL'S WILL HAS SECRET BEQUESTS

Pittsburgh, June 21.—The will of Lillian Russell Moore, well known stage favorite, and wife of Alex ander P. Moore, newspaper proprietor, was filed for probate here. It is a very short document, conforming to her desire that no publicity be given her benevolences.

The will stipulates a trust fund shall be set aside for her daughter, Dorothy, and the rest of the estate turned into cash and securities. Mrs. Moore bequeaths to her husband, "absolutely knowing that he will carry out my wishes with regard to certain charities and provisions for my relatives."

Amoskeag Mills Strike

Arbitration Ought to Establish Facts and Show the Public Which Side Deserves Sympathy

The employes of the Amoskeag Mills are on a strike. The Amoskeag is one of the greatest cotton mills in the world. This is the nineteenth week of its great strike. The producing power of 17,000 men and women, trained to their occupation, has been lost to this community and to the world by the strike, for the Amoskeag Mills supplies almost every part of the world, by this wasteful, destructive war between capital and labor.

Fourteen months ago a reduction in wages 22½ per cent. was ordered and accepted by the operatives. Last February another cut of 20 per cent. was ordered by the Amoskeag Mills plus an increase in the hours of labor from 48 to 54 a week, with an extra measure of labor demanded from each operative. The average rate of wages prevailing in the Amoskeag Mills was $18 a week. This proposed second reduction would bring the average rate below $15.

The State Labor Commissioner, after an investigation, proposed a basis of settlement which has been accepted by the striking operatives. They say it contains the three essentials of a satisfactory settlement. This proposal recommends that the men and women be taken back to work without discrimination on the old 48-hour basis and that the question of extra work and reduction in wages be arbitrated by a neutral, impartial board. The mill representatives have not yet accepted this suggestion for a settlement.

Governor Bass calls our attention to the question of the innocent third party—the consuming public—which has a decided interest in this controversy and yet is interested neither on the side of labor or capital in the dispute.

The representatives of the Amoskeag Mills have made a general statement that they are in a financial condition which requires them to make these drastic cuts in the wages of their workmen for their labor. Of course, they have offered no proof of the accuracy of their statement, and it is challenged by the leaders of the workmen. Under such circumstances we see no reason why an arbitration by intelligent men ought not to establish the facts and show the public in what direction their sympathy ought to go and the representatives of the government in what direction their duties lie.

It may be that the Amoskeag has the facts on its side. If so let them be publicly established as the basis of settlement by a board of arbitration which the State Labor Commissioner recommended.

Gov. Baxter Deserves His Success in the Primaries

He has held the standard of liberalism in his own hands for some time in Maine. His policy of preserving to the people their natural resources against schemes of private exploitation has made him powerful enemies, but apparently has not made him enemies as powerful as it has made him friends. It is popular discrimination like this which enables the public to distinguish a friend from an enemy or an indifferent neutral lacking in troubled waters for the best catch he can make, and which enables the public, after marking out that friend, to "grapple him to themselves with hooks of steel," that make democratic government flourish.

Governor Baxter has been a courageous and farsighted public servant, and he deserves the reward which the primaries indicate that he will receive.

Probe Lighting Rates

Small Users of Gas and Electricity of Greater Boston Should Work for Public Ownership of Plants

The effect upon the small users of gas and electricity in the town of Winthrop and the cities of Malden, Everett, Medford, Melrose and Revere of the recent changes in rates for gas and electricity made by the several gas and electric lighting companies which serve these cities on examination appears to be unfavorable, although it looked at first superficially favorable.

The result of this change has been to increase the price of gas to all consumers who use gas up to 1,400 cubic feet per month, the increase varying with the amount used from 1 per cent. to 115 per cent.

In the case of electricity the increase to all customers who use between five and seventeen kilowatt hours a month varies from 1 per cent. to 27 per cent., depending upon the amount used.

What can be done? Obviously, apply to the Department of Public Utilities for an investigation of the rates, and in the meantime do what you can to have public lighting in your city or town.

Keep Your Sense of Humor

The first commandment is that we must work or fight in peace as well as in war. In the second are the whole Ten Commandments. In the third he makes a test of ability to "come back"; that is, our capacity to recover from defeat. Fourth, he says to keep our sense of humor; that is, to keep our sense of proportion and our faith.

There is no doubt that American people prefer for their leaders men and women who can keep their sense of humor. So much of this world is entirely beyond our control that if we do our best and smile, even though our best seems to be too little, we will do better than if we look tragic and feel tragic about the situation.

Mr. Hopkins' fifth is to keep faith in God. Probably the fourth and fifth are the same, for keeping one's humor in the face of failures requires faith—an assurance of it.

Railroad Wage Cut

Editor Boston American:

Have read the comment of Mr. Underwood of the Erie Railroad on the proposed cut of railroad men's wages, in which he states that it would be a good idea to stop the publication of newspapers, so as to give the Wall street barons a better opportunity to steal a billion more from the government. He does not think there will be a strike, and the crowd whom he represents will not worry if there is one, for if it comes they will just say they have no trouble with the men; it is the Labor Board's trouble. Let them settle it, and a nice fat, juicy bill will be presented to the government after the strike is settled, for damage and loss which nobody will be able to find only railroad officials, and then the government will give them enough money to build another transcontinental railroad, and it won't take as many minutes in Congress to give them the money as it is taking weeks to try and get a bonus for the men who really did something for their country.

New Home Needed

Editor Boston American:

In behalf of the twenty aged men and women guests of the Mary Fisher Home in Tenafly, who now face eviction and the severing of what they consider their last friendships, may I ask you to publish this letter? I am sure that among your readers there are many who will be glad to lend a helping hand, and I know that any contributor will be well repaid by the good-luck wishes which these old people send to interested friends. Twenty-three years ago Miss Mary Fisher established the home as a refuge for professional folk. She gave her all, but the home was never endowed. Five hundred workers at various times have been cared for, and there are now twenty guests. The buildings have become inadequate for continued occupancy. Unless we can raise the money for a new building, these little guests, who had expected to live out their lives in the bonds of these last friendships, must be separated and transferred to individual homes.

Contributions may be sent direct to the Mary Fisher Home, Tenafly, New Jersey, or to Miss Caroline L. Cautier of Tenafly, treasurer, who will be glad to give further particulars.

POTENTIAL THRILLS LIE IN SIMPLEST SITUATIONS

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

HOW do you get your thrills when you want one?

The other day, royalty—a bit of it that is left—got a thrill unexpectedly. In exquisite, courtly politeness came a telephonic request to the Military Club of Madrid. The page who received the message thought that one of the other boys was playing a joke on him.

To his horror, the secretary addressed the person who had rung up as "Your Majesty."

The page was summoned to the palace. He was presented to the King, who handed him a 100-peseta note, saying laughingly: "There you are, old bean!"

Talking of royalty and the like, the White Star liner Olympic lately brought over among its passengers Captain Harry C. G. Mills, cousin of Earl Lascelles, who married the daughter of Britain's King.

The captain is 6 feet 7 and well built, weighs 280 pounds, is a big game hunter and admittedly a seeker for "thrills." He said he was going to Los Angeles to do a stunt for the movies.

Something like flying along in an airplane, sliding down a rope onto the back of a galloping horse, then climbing the rope and into the plane again.

The coroner of Westchester County, New York, was called to Yonkers recently to investigate the accidental death of the seventeen-year-old son of a prominent citizen in a nearby Jersey town.

It appears that this youth and another were beating their way, riding on the roof of a sleeping car. He failed to note a bridge near the Yonkers depot. His skull was fractured, he fell to the track below and was probably instantly killed.

The boys did not need to beat their way, they had plenty of money in their pockets, but they wanted a thrilling adventure.

One of them got more thrills than he can ever tell about, unless Conan Doyle or Oliver Lodge is able to persuade him to revisit these glimpses of the moon and to reveal something of the possibilities of infinite thrills "over there."

One does not wish to be unsympathetic with thrill hunters in general or unwilling to drop a tear for this tragic victim of his own desire for sensations.

This and the preceding two stories are taken out of a day's news merely to illustrate the fairly universal desire of our human nature to escape the humdrum of existence and to find an outlet in the excitement of the unusual.

A constant changing of the focus of your interest, an increasing variation of your activities, a fresh view of the implications of your job, a concentration of your devotion to your work and your setting, will give you intensive and extensive satisfactions with relative safety.

Even the simplest situation is potentially full of a number of thrills. Life, the mere living, is endlessly exciting if you are really alive.

DO YOU LIKE TO BE MEAN?

Are you not surprised when you realize how mean and disagreeable you would be if you allowed yourself to act as you feel?

And is it not true that if you have such a spell at home, where you feel you are free to act yourself, that you lose all control and do not try to exert control?

Often you wish you were boss in the place where you work so that you might "tear things loose," as you express it, and vent your feelings.

In other words, you want to be as mean as possible.

The more you think along this line the harder it is for you to gain the mastery, and the more arrogant and irritable you become at home, or wherever you are not responsible to someone who has the right to dismiss or evict you.

Can you not see which way you are headed?

SEEN AND HEARD

REPRESENTATIVE PAUL HINES, who represents part of South Boston in the Legislature, is being urged by his friends to become a candidate for the City Council at the next city election. Despite the fact that he is "quoted" as saying, that he would retire from politics this year and devote all his time to the study of law, the pressure upon him has been so great in all probability he will reconsider, and become a candidate.

At the opening of the school term next Fall in Boston the city may adopt the plan now in operation in New York, of supplying the children with a certain amount of milk each day. The system was explained to MAYOR CURLEY by MISS LAURA A. CAUBLE of the New York Bureau of Nutrition recently.

MARTIN M. LOMASNEY keeps himself in condition by walking. You are apt to meet him any night, from 7:30 to 9, between Beacon street, Commonwealth avenue and the Public Gardens.

SPEAKER YOUNG, the old Harvard sprinter, divides his time between horseback riding and walking. It is not unusual for him and REPRESENTATIVE HENRY L. SHATTUCK to start out on the hottest Summer day for a hike to the White Mountains, where they climb Mt. Washington and put in a night at the Tip Top House.

HERBERT E. ELLIS, adjustor for the Rent and Housing Committee at City Hall, hears a great many complaints in the course of a day, and has the reputation of adjusting 100 per cent. of them, but here is one that he passes up —A tenant asked him to stop the roller skating of the children on the floor above her, as it caused too much noise. Ice skates would be much better, we'll say.

One member of the Curley Swimming Club had a narrow escape from being stranded the other morning off City Point. SECRETARY DAN GILLEN and MICHAEL WARD, also of the Mayor's office, were out in a boat celebrating the inauguration of the club. When about a mile off shore Dan jumped overboard and left our friend Michael to get to shore the best way he could. If it hadn't been for the stiff east wind that was blowing on shore Michael might have wandered down the harbor to Deer Island.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON POLES OF PLANETS

By Garrett P. Serviss.

"I would like to know what is meant by the north pole and the south pole when speaking of a heavenly body like the moon or Mars, and I think I have even heard it applied to the sun."—Interested Reader.

YOU surely know that the moon, the planets and the sun are all globular in shape like the earth, and that, again like the earth, they all revolve "on their axes"—i. e., each turns around an imaginary line running straight through its centre. The two diametrically opposite points where this straight line through the centre, called the axis of rotation, reaches the surface are the "poles."

To distinguish the poles of the earth we call one the "north" pole and the other the "south" pole. What names they give to their poles on Mars, Venus, Jupiter, etc., we shall not know until Mr. Marconi, or somebody else, opens communication for us across the interplanetary ether, and teaches us the languages that they speak in those other worlds. In the meantime we attach our names to their poles, since we find that the axes of all of those globes have nearly the same direction in space that the earth's axis has.

Imagine a lot of tops of various sizes all spinning on the same table. Their pegs are their axes of rotation, and because they all stand on one basis, the upper end of every peg may be called its north pole and the lower end its south pole.

The tiny inhabitants of one of the tops, looking across at the others spinning in the space around them, would in their elfin tongue give names to the upper and under ends of the pegs of the other tops that would correspond to the names of the upper and under ends of the peg of their own top.

So when we look at the moon we perceive that it is slowly turning on an axis that is nearly parallel in direction with the axis of the earth—i.e., a north and south direction—and we recognize that its north pole is turned toward the same quarter of the sky as that which the earth's north pole faces.

The same is true of Mars, and the other planets generally, and even of the sun. The distant planet Uranus has its axis running in a direction almost at right angles to that of the earth, and the still more distant planet Neptune seems to have had its axis tipped over end for end, but these are exceptional cases.

Both poles of the moon are situated among lofty mountains. "The north pole of the moon," says Nelson, "falls between two high mountain chains in a wide plain close to two high mountains, Gioja Alpha and Beta, the former on the east and 9,500 feet high, the latter on the west and still higher perhaps. The summits of the two peaks come to the pole must, from their height, enjoy perpetual day."

Of the moon's south pole the same authority on selenography says: "It is surrounded by lofty peaks, but is not marked by any peculiarity of form or color, and is usually hidden by the lofty south wall of Malapert, though, under great easterly libration, it is occasionally visible through a deep pass, and under high southerly libration it can be seen over the wall."

If you stood on the moon's earth would appear uppermost or toward your zenith; if you stood on the moon's south pole the south pole of the earth would appear uppermost.

—Medbury Says—

A lawyer has no trouble in distributing an estate in dollars and acres, but it's hard to divide one when it's in pints and quarts.

If a man could take his liquor with him when he dies he could have it handy and grab it as he was passing into the hereafter, but most men aren't sure which way they're going so they wouldn't know whether to store it in the attic or the cellar.

When a man buys a quart of whiskey today he consults two professional men. He sees a doctor about a prescription and a lawyer about his will.

It's impossible for a drinking man to beat death. If he can't get it he dies of a broken heart, and if he does get it the liquor kills him.

As soon as a man buys a quart of whiskey his wife and around waiting for him to drink it, so he can die and leave it to them.

But we're getting so now that we walk direct from the bootlegger's to the undertaker's.

If possible, it's best to drink all of your liquor before you die and cut your heirs off with an empty bottle.

When we studied liquid measures at school we never thought that it was going to come in handy some day in making out our will.
